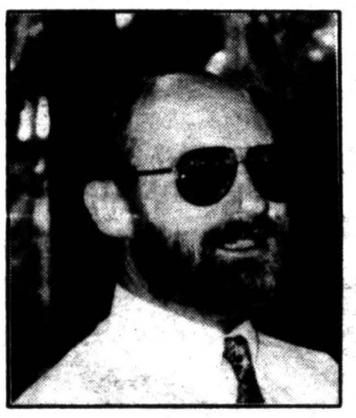
Gay politician recalls Stonewall — and 25 years of progress since

■ John Laird's personal story matches movement's evolution.

By PAUL WOLF

WHEN JOHN Laird made his first bid for Santa Cruz mayor in 1983, he figured out how he wanted to approach the dilemma posed by his sexual orientation: He would neither hide it nor trumpet it.



JOHN LAIRD

In retrospect, Laird believes the rest of the world faced more confusion over the one aspect of his personal life than he did.

As did every candidate, Laird circulated literature about himself, including a list of affiliations, which included a couple of gay and lesbian organizations. He assumed people would get the message and that would take care of that.

"The Santa Cruz Sentinel just left out those affiliations and figured they were doing me a favor," Laird told an audience of 17, assembled at the Unitarian Church in Carmel on Tuesday.

Laird was speaking before the Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays (P-FLAG) at an informal event marking the 25th anniversary of the Stonewall riots.

"People would ask me, 'Were you openly gay in that election?' and I say, 'I don't really know — only about 6,000 or 7,000 (voters) actually knew."

It was after he was elected that the media stormed

CV's Hurley seeks to 'raise consciousness' about child abuse

By SUSAN BECK

JANET HURLEY is willing to show the pain.

She also is willing to tell the truth. These two qualities alone empower her to "raise the consciousness" of those who have been abused and, in turn, abuse others.

"I had a vision," said Hurley, a Carmel Valley psychologist. "It was a vision that was complete. It came to me like an electrical charge."

Hurley figured the only way to prevent child abuse was to get child abusers to "claim their history," acknowledge they have passed it on, and then talk with other abusers.

"It's a grass-roots approach," Hurley said. "Abus-

NEW CHIEF of staff Leon Panetta's considerable stature in Washington defies party lines.

■ Analysis: As Clinton's 'shakeup' hints at governing crisis, former Carmel-based congressman called upon to restore discipline.

By PAUL WOLF

THE MEDIA accounts of Leon Panetta's rise to chief of staff have lent the impression the former longtime Carmel congressman would be nothing short of a one-man emergency task force to save the president.

However one characterizes it, Panetta's new role is significant: Bill Clinton has hopes the Washington veteran can help him ease his crisis in governing and image.

If Clinton has become known as being long on ideas but short on discipline, tapping Panetta is tantamount to an admission of his shortcomings.

'The president has been hit from all sides on the health care issue, and his popularity is suffering. Clearly, there has been a lot of bleeding going on at the White House, and, if the metaphor holds up, it is hard to imagine a better surgeon than Leon Panetta to go in and stop that bleeding.'

— David Yamada,
political science instructor,
Monterey Peninsula College

But it is more than that. It is a recognition of Panetta's considerable stature — which defies party lines and is recognized both in Washington circles and in his old stomping grounds in Monterey County, where he served the 17th Congressional District from 1976 to 1993.

Honest and open. Tough yet gentle. Integrity. The descriptions quickly have a way of blending together.

The portrait of Panetta is commonly shared from all quarters. Regardless of what happens next, no one from the Monterey Peninsula has risen to so lofty a height.

Panetta replaces Thomas McLarty, who has reportedly admitted he was not the right man to serve as "gatekeeper to the president."

In the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), Panetta will be replaced by Alice Rivlin, the second in command.

"While the White House is under such criticism, no one can criticize Leon Panetta," remarked the man who holds Panetta's old job. That would be Rep. Sam Farr, D-Carmel, who last year was elected to the congressional slot when Panetta was picked for OMB.

Farr described Panetta as a singularly "unflamboyant" politician who has made a reputation out of "hard work and attention to detail," rather than posturing.

In fact, Farr was quicker to cite the president's most recent rough patches or joke about his own freshman status ("I am not a Washington insider — yet") than to say anything less than flattering about Panetta.

Indeed, Panetta's mission will be as considerable as the reputation he boasts. Speaking on ABC's "Nightline" Monday, evening, Panetta could not elaborate on the details, but stated: "We are going

Carole Gentis brings ray of sunshine to CV children's center

CAROLE GENTIS, director of the Sunshine Children's Center in Carmel Valley, shares a moment with two-year-old Andrew Leach.

NOT EVERYONE can appreciate two dozen small children rushing toward them, all screaming at the top of their lungs.

However, Carole Gentis, 26, considers it the best part of her working day.

"I walk through the gate in the morning, and they all come running toward me, shouting 'Miss Carole, Miss Carole,'" said Gentis, director of the Sunshine Children's Center in Carmel Valley Village. "I look forward to it."

A native of Texas, Gentis attended Stephen F. Austin University in Nacogdoches as a communications major. To help pay for her education, she took a job as a nanny.

"I realized I had a gift for working with children," Gentis said. "I felt I could make a difference in the world."

In 1990, she moved to the Monterey Peninsula with a bachelor's degree in child development. She also is a member of the National Association for the Education of Young Children and California Professional Association for Childhood Education. Since her arrival, she has taught at Saint Angela's Children's Center in Pacific Grove and was the director of the Wayfarer Pre-School in Carmel. Last year, she started working for Lynne and Fred Nelson, owners of the Sunshine Children's Center.

With the assistance of Jo Anne Simon and Pam Narvaez, also child development educators, Gentis oversees the activities of 20 youngsters, from 7:30 am. to 5:30 p.m., five days a week. The center also offers a half-day program from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

In addition, parents may leave their children at the center before a school bus picks them up and takes them to kindergarten at Tularcitos Elementary School. The children are returned to the center after school.

Routine opportunity

While child-care centers are currently perceived as a routine opportunity to teach children certain skills early on, the movement actually faltered after World War II, Gentis said.

Most women left the work force to be with their families as their fathers and husbands returned from the war, Gentis added. In the 1960s, the YMCA organized the first pre-school as more women rejoined the work force.

While the Sunshine Children's Center offers several educational activities from language arts and math concepts to science projects, Gentis believes the most important aspect of child care is teaching kids how to deal with their peers.

"I encourage a little interaction with other children outside the home in a school environment," she said.

Children learn the most from birth to six years old: speaking, walking, coordination and bodily communication, Gentis said.

"The more you stimulate a child's developing brain

City steps up role in addressing housing needs

■ Public to participate in forming policies of the housing element of the general plan.

By PAUL WOLF

SHOULD CARMEL extend its efforts to help citizens find money to "rehabilitate" aging cottages?

Are city officials correct in their viewing that apartments downtown are desirable?

These are just a couple of questions planners intend to ask citizens at a series of public workshops on the newly drafted housing element of the Carmel General Plan. The informal workshops — scheduled for July 13, July 27 and Aug. 10 — will be followed by a formal public hearing on Aug. 31.

Residents can obtain a copy of the 60-page draft element available for review or purchase ($5) at the Carmel Planning and Building Department.

"Whatever the public wants to contribute (at these workshops) is fine, so long as it is on the issue is housing — meeting needs, availability, affordability, and so on," said Melanie Billig, who serves on the Carmel Planning Commission and has been active on the revisions to the housing element.

The last revision was completed in 1988. That means the city is a year behind the state mandate that instructs cities to update the element every five years, according to Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth.

The draft document calls for the city to achieve achieve certain goals. They are:

• Developing an "incentives" program for encouraging more affordable housing in Carmel.

While market forces take the matter of low-income housing largely out of the hands of any municipality, the city could do more to require affordable housing units as part of private development projects, or forge public-private partnerships to maintain such units, according to Roseth.

According to the planning director, there are only 50 officially designated affordable units in Carmel.

• "Fast-tracking" certain kinds of applications so long as they help meet certain goals, such as low-income housing or preserving downtown dwelling units.

Certain kinds of applications could make their way to planning commission agendas before others, Roseth said.

"Fast-tracking certainly can be effective," Billig said.

Along similar lines, desirable projects could have their fees waived or reduced.

"It's an old village tradition to have people living in the downtown," Roseth said. "This doesn't mean you have the shopkeeper living upstairs, but someone does."

He said downtown dwellings provide affordable housing, reduce transportation needs for the elderly and create a 24-hour presence.

• Finding ways to help citizens rehabilitate aging structures.

The draft element suggests the city could be a clearinghouse of information for people, particularly seniors on fixed incomes, seeking state and federal assistance to repair their homes.

But the questions arise: How much work would the city have to put into such programs? Is that a good use of staff time? "There may be some philosophical disagreement about government assisting people with their specific housing needs," Billig commented.

New picture

The draft element not only proposes new policies, but encapsulates an up-to-date picture of Carmel demographics.

That picture reveals a town with an aging population, a growing number of seniors on fixed incomes who live alone, and an aging housing stock.

Half of the residential structures in Carmel are over 40 years old, and therefore a greater pace of "redevelopment" is likely to occur in the next couple of decades, Roseth said.

Water officials seek near-term supplies but coming up dry

■ With about 3 years left in its allocation, Carmel, too, is feeling the pressure.

By PAUL WOLF

WITH CARMEL, Pacific Grove and Del Rey Oaks decrying the shortage of water, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) is under great pressure to find interim supplies before the new Los Padres dam comes on line in the early part of the next century.

Unlike PG and Del Rey Oaks, Carmel has not petitioned formally for a bigger piece of the water pie. However, with only about three years of growth left on its allocation, it clearly has a vested interest in the district's success.

If the city runs out of water, it will have to impose a moratorium on new water hookups in both the residential and commercial sectors, according to Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth.

"I think it's a critical issue facing the city," he said.

The situation is most pressing for downtown water uses, Roseth said, noting, "We are nearly out of water in the commercial category."

Frustrating search

According to water officials, the search for water may lead down a frustrating path.

One must bear in mind that the dam is no sure bet, with a completion date at the earliest of 2002. And peninsula voters must authorize the project with a majority vote in a ballot measure slated for November 1995.

On the subject of interim supply projects, MPWMD Chairman Jim Hughes said, "I don't think there is much out there."

According to MPWMD General Manager Jim Cofer, the staff and water board will explore three possible supply routes in the coming months. They are:

• Developing another well in the Seaside basin in addition to Paralta.

The water district "fast-tracked" the Paralta project by ending the peninsula-wide moratorium on connections and dividing its projected 1,000-acre-foot yield even though construction is not finished.

• An expansion of the Pebble Beach Co.'s reclamation (water recycling) project.

The current project, weeks away from completion, involves treating more water at the Carmel Area Wastewater District plant and using it on Pebble Beach Golf courses. Recycling 800 acre feet will free up the same amount for such uses as drought reserve and growth.

The company is financing the project ($34 million) and will be the major beneficiary of the freed-up water. How much water, if any, the cities will derive from the project has not been resolved yet.

The purpose behind expanding the reclamation project would be to bring Pacific Grove into the loop. An additional 100 acre feet could be recycled by treating more flow at the sewage plant and extending pipe lines to allow PG water its golf course and cemetery with recycled water.

"It is not very difficult to do physically," said MPWMD General Manager Jim Cofer. "The difficult part would be the financial arrangements. It's not cheap water; it could be as expensive as desalination."

The expansion contemplated would cost about $1.5 million, according to Cofer. Actually, the precise amount of water Pacific Grove would receive would depend on how much money it wants to contribute. Pebble Beach could go after more reclamation water by joining the expanded project.

"If they became a fiscal sponsor, they could get water credits accordingly," Cofer explained.

• Pursuing a risky venture being proposed by an Oklahoma-based firm, which would seek water in the subterranean rock found in an area south of Rancho San Carlos.

For now, district officials appear not to be investing great hopes in any of these options. Indeed, the district has had enough trouble with its much more

'Representative's Day' on July 8 will feature talk by Sam Farr

■ Congressman to address constituents at Vista Lobos.

IT PROMISES to be a kind of Congressional Open House. And you won't even have to go to Washington, D.C. to attend.

Rep. Sam Farr, D-Carmel, will hobnob with his constituents, discuss the issues and, of course, answer questions. The event will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday, July 8, at the Vista Lobos Room between Torres and Junipero and Third Avenue in Carmel.

"This is one of the most exciting times in our region's history," Farr said, referring to the Fort Ord conversion and the promise it has for the area's economy.

The event is being co-sponsored by the Northeast Carmel Neighbors Association, The Carmel Residents Association and The Carmel Pine Cone.

ers helping abusers to raise the conscious level of what child abuse is. It just came to me."

In 1989, Hurley founded TASK — Take a Stand for Kids — an organization dedicated to the prevention of child abuse through education.

A few weeks ago, Hurley received the prestigious Talcott Bates award from the Child Abuse Prevention Council of Monterey County. She also received a Certificate of Special Congressional Recognition from Rep. Sam Farr and special certificates of recognition from Sen. Henry J. Mello and Assemblyman Bruce McPherson.

"I was given the Talcott Bates award," Hurley said, "because they could see that the work we are doing is reaching people, not only to intellectually understand child abuse, but to re-experience abuse of their own."

While Hurley's "vision" for TASK may have seemed spontaneous, the 67-year-old psychologist, who was abused as a child and abused her own children, has a long history of dealing with abuse issues.

"If you are abusing your children, doing the things that were done to you — as I did — there's help," she said quietly, as tears flowed down her cheeks.

The seeds of that realization began many years ago.

Janet was pursuing a bachelor's degree in physical education at Sacramento State University when she met Regis Hurley, captain of the basketball team.

They fell in love, got married and moved to the Monterey Peninsula about 30 years ago. They adopted two children, Gina and Jim. Regis was the basketball coach at Monterey High School and Hurley taught physical education at Carmel Middle School.

CARMEL VALLEY psychologist Janet Hurley believes child abuse can be stopped.

"That's about the time I got interested in working with encounter groups at Monterey Peninsula College (MPC)," Hurley recalled. "I learned about people by the way they moved. It was sensitivity training. I was making it up as I went along. Whatever worked. It was wonderful."

Through her work with encounter groups, the issue of abuse began to surface. Hurley started to realize there were bigger issues at hand than finding out "who I was."

Hurley started to study psychology on her own and, when the family moved to Flagstaff, Ariz., she attended Northern Arizona State University and earned a master's degree in educational and counseling psychology.

After returning to California, Hurley "created" a family counseling internship for herself at the Catholic Diocese in Monterey. "I've always been very resourceful," she admitted.

Hurley convinced the diocese's bishop to sponsor her internship. "They paid my rent and two supervisors' salaries. I received the money and gave it to the diocese. Whatever was left over, I got. I started a private practice under a nonprofit organization — and it was legal."

In addition, Hurley lectured for free throughout the area, including MPC. "Whoever asked me, I showed up," she remembered.

Two faces

Hurley was professionally successful. Her personal life, however, was falling apart.

Supervisors postpone vote on CV development

■ More than 100 Mid Valley residents sign petition opposing proposed commercial building.

By SUSAN BECK

THE VOICE of more than 100 residents opposing a proposed commercial building in their Mid Valley neighborhood was heard loud and clear Tuesday as Monterey County Board of Supervisors agreed to delay voting on the development.

The board unanimously agreed to give both the residents and the developers, John and Ruth Picard, until July 26 to resolve their differences in a meeting with Fifth District Supervisor Sam Karas.

"Traffic is the key issue," Karas said. "The developer and the neighbors need to sit down and work something out everyone can live with." In all fairness to both sides, Karas added, if the developer would agree to a meeting, "we could see amenity in the neighborhood."

Douglas Kay, contractor for Kay Builders representing the Picards, said "I guess we have no choice."

Ruth Picard added, "We are trying to be a good neighbor. But I wish someone had discussed traffic as a possible problem sooner."

Pat and Karl Kauffman, whose home on Center Street faces the project site, presented the board with a petition, which represents 95 percent of the neighborhood in the immediate area of the proposed development.

The petition listed several recommendations for the two-story, 9,000-square-foot warehouse-retail building on Berwick Drive and Center Street, next to the Mid Valley Shopping Mall.

They included: The structure — designed for office space, warehousing and retail sales of African and Italian imports — be reduced to a one-story building; A second driveway onto Center Street be eliminated.

All adjacent commercial buildings on the block have one driveway.

The Kauffmans are especially interested in the RUTH PICARD talked with Jim Tullis, an associate of Kiciyapi Associates, at the Monterey County Board of Supervisors chambers Tuesday about changes to her proposed commercial building in Mid Carmel Valley.

KARL AND Pat Kauffman voiced concerns about the proposed development's impact on traffic.

traffic that would exit onto Center Street, a 150-foot, dead-end road adjacent to another empty lot.

"We all moved to the valley to get away from traffic," Pat Kauffman said. "Center Street is used a lot by children and adults to get to the shopping center. It's a way to avoid walking on Carmel Valley Road. A commercial driveway onto the street is an accident waiting to happen."

Karl Kauffman told board members, "The voice of more than 100 speaks louder that the voice of two. We have to live next to this abomination. Let the people decide."

Robert Slimmon, Monterey County Planning and Building Department director, noted the empty lot at the end of Center Street is also zoned for commercial use.

"We will be seeing commercial development there eventually, which undoubtedly will access off Center Street as well," Slimmon said.

Karas questioned Gerald Gromko, director of Monterey County Public Works, about changing the two-way driveway exit onto Center Street to a circular driveway, which would exit onto Berwick Drive.

"Our department had no problem with the plan as proposed," Gromko said. "But if the developer wishes to reroute traffic to Berwick Drive, that is acceptable."

Jim Tullis of Kiciyapi Associates, architects for the project, pointed to the irony of the residents' dispute over the two-way driveway.

"Ideally, we would have liked to have one driveway," Tullis said. But he said county planners required 30 parking spaces, which left no room for a turnaround-space for small delivery trucks.

"Now, the whole site might have to be redesigned," Tullis lamented.

Otter Cove residents take stand to save Monterey pines

By SUSAN BECK

AN EMOTIONAL outburst at a Big Sur Multi-Agency Advisory Council meeting last Friday set in motion what is likely to become a heated debate over the possible destruction of almost 200 Monterey pine trees along Highway 1, south of the Highlands.

"I get tired of waking up every few months to some new 'twist' the Enviro-Nazis have thought up to torture those of us who live on the coast," shouted Ed Messick, president of the Otter Cove Homeowners Association.

His response came on the heels of a report by Robert Slimmon, director of the Monterey County Planning and Building Department. Slimmon said county planners recently issued a building permit for a project in the Otter Cove subdivision with a condition that a Monterey pine abutting Highway 1 be cut down to open the ocean view to the public.

"This is our first attempt to get all of these trees down," Slimmon told the council. "Once these trees are gone, we will be able to see the ocean. Now all you can see are the trees."

Messick said the county "blackmailed" the homeowners association into agreeing to cut down the obstructing Monterey pine so the building permit would be issued.

"While I can find many laws against cutting trees, I am unable to find a single regulation or law to make people cut down trees," Messick added. "We are not going to cut down any more trees without a court order."

Exemption granted

Otter Cove was approved before the Big Sur Coast Land Use Plan and California Coastal Act were in place, which require an ocean view from Highway 1, Slimmon said.

An exemption was granted to allow the property owners to build as long as they screened their homes from view from Highway 1. However, in doing so, they could not block the ocean view, Slimmon noted.

Most of the homes at Otter Cove are sufficiently screened from Highway 1 by trees along Aurora Del Mar, the main subdivision road, which runs perpendicular to the highway at a lower level, Slimmon added.

However, several pine and cypress trees were planted close to Highway 1 when Otter Cove was developed and are currently obstructing the public's view to the ocean, he said. "I personally think the trees should be cut down so that we can look at the ocean, not the trees."

View huggers

Where will it end? Messick asked. "Are they going to require cutting down all the trees at Yankee Point next?"

According to Messick, the trees along Highway 1 at Otter Cove have always been there.

"We never planted trees along the highway, expect to replace a few that died," he said. "Besides, there are more than 70 miles of Big Sur coast without trees for the view huggers to enjoy without destroying beautiful trees that screen the houses at Otter Cove."

Fifth District Supervisor Sam Karas, chair for the council, referred to a tree committee he formed seven months ago in the Highlands-Bixby area.

"I never realized that trees are so controversial," Karas noted. "After seven months, nothing was solved. I respect everyone who has feelings about trees. I can understand the property owners' position. And I appreciate that people want to see the ocean. I think we are going to end up in court over this."

Senior lunch program forges ahead

By SHIRLEY KOPLOY

THE LUNCH program for seniors on the Monterey Peninsula which ends today under its current Alliance on Aging contract will resume at centers in Marina on July 11, and in Monterey and Seaside on July 18, according to Kalah Bumba, an Area Agency on Aging (AAA) planner.

Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula will be the new provider on a 90-day trial basis, Bumba said.

Meals on Wheels will prepare the food and deliver it to the Monterey Senior Center, the Oldemeyer Center in Seaside and the Marina Community Center. Site management will be provided by city staff members and volunteers.

Bumba stressed that, in this new program, it is critical that seniors take the responsibility at their own centers, as paid site managers will no longer be on staff. She added that the community has thus far been supportive.

In the interim, the AAA is urging seniors to attend the weekday lunch program at the Sally Judd Griffin Center in Pacific Grove, sponsored by Meals on Wheels, which also conducts its home delivery of hot meals to the housebound from that location. Or they may bring a bag lunch to their own centers, which will remain open.

The home-delivered meal service to seniors in rural areas – an AAA priority – will continue uninterrupted, according to Bumba. Arrangements have been made with the Food Bank of Monterey County to supply a five-day meal pack of frozen food for each recipient to be delivered once weekly in the South Monterey County area.

The North Monterey County hot meal service will be taken over by Food and Nutrition Services of Santa Cruz County beginning July 5.

Multiple solutions

Multiple solutions to replace the Alliance lunch program have been the focus of attention for Bumba and Marie Glavin, AAA director, since the Alliance announced last month it would not renew its contract with the AAA, which administers funds for the program. Rather than have one agency handle the entire county, the AAA has broken the program up into smaller units using various providers.

Other plans are underway to continue the countywide lunch service at 10 other sites in Salinas, Castroville, Prunedale, Gonzales, Greenfield, Pajaro, Soledad and King City. All agreements with providers are for a 90-day trial period.

The Alliance had conducted the lunch and rural mobile meal service for 18 years.

CUSD OK's expansion of Tularcitos multipurpose room

By SCOTT BREARTON

ARCHITECTURAL PLANS for a 2,150-square-foot expansion of the multipurpose room at Tularcitos Elementary School were approved at a Carmel Unified School District board meeting June 23.

CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin said the reconstruction and remodeling effort would make the multipurpose room "a much more functional building and a real asset" to the Carmel Valley campus.

According to Baldwin, the remodeling and expansion will include asbestos abatement, new paint, roofing and floor and wall coverings.

Baldwin also said student bathrooms will be made accessible for handicapped persons.

The plans were drawn by Keeble, Rhoda and Todd, a Monterey-based architectural firm.

Baldwin estimated the total cost of the project at $579,000. The district's insurance carrier will pay about $338,000, he said, noting that $241,000 will have to come from the district's general fund.

The damage incurred in the March 25 blaze was originally estimated at $225,000.

Tularcitos Principal Karen Camilli said grants from Friends of Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) and other community organizations have enabled administrators to replace "all the equipment that was lost (in the fire), plus some."

Camilli predicted reconstruction would begin by January 1995 and completed by June 1995.

CHS grads plan gatherings

■ Alumni to meet July 11 in CHS library

NEWLY FORMED group of Carmel High School alumni will meet at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, July 11, in the CHS library.

According to Carmel parent and CHS alumnus Sandy Wise, the fledgling alumni organization is seeking participation from all former Carmel High students.

"Besides the financial support, we would like the human support, the contact, the networking ability," Wise explained. "We want the alumni involved in things that go on at the school."

Additionally, the CHS Class of '64 will hold its 30-year class reunion in conjunction with an alumni picnic planned for Sunday, Aug. 14, at CHS, according to Wise.

Additional information can be obtained by calling Wise at 659-2778.

■ Class of '69 sets reunion planning meeting

THE CARMEL High School Class of 1969 is holding another in its series of planning meetings for its upcoming 25th reunion. The next meeting is scheduled for 6 p.m. Thursday, July 7 at Simpson's Restaurant.

The Class of '69's reunion will begin at noon on Saturday, Aug. 20 at the Carmel Beach on Scenic between 12th and 13th streets.

Tom Gardiner, reunion committee spokesperson, says he encourages any interested 1969 graduates to participate in the upcoming planning meeting.

Gardiner said the Aug. 20 reunion, though being organized by the Class of '69, is open to all CHS graduates.

'Spiritual path' motivates Hurley to serve

"Regis and I divorced because I could not stay sober," she said frankly. "I left because I thought I was allergic to him. I had to get away to find out if it was the alcohol."

After Janet attended her first self-help program, she never had another drink. "I immediately realized alcohol was the problem, not my husband," she noted. "After that, we fell in love more deeply and became the best of friends."

Janet and Regis never lived together again. Instead, their son chose to live with his father, and Janet moved with her daughter to Carmel Valley, where she set up a private practice.

Combining behavioral and humanistic approaches to psychology, Hurley helps people understand what they are feeling, but most importantly how to change their habits.

Group therapy creates a "functioning family" atmosphere, Hurley said. "It's a place to feel safe, tell the truth and learn to be loved and give love."

In addition, the group will confront people who falters from their commitment to transformation, she noted. "But it's all done with love — not judgment."

Love addict

Hurley's next professional step was meeting Pia Mellody, a "very important person in the area of co-dependency. She was my mentor, and I was her mentor."

Mellody and her husband, Pat, worked at The Meadows, a co-dependency treatment center in Wickenburg, Ariz. "I checked myself in for five weeks," Hurley said.

During this time she began to look closely at her own abuse as a child and her addictions, Hurley said. In addition to alcohol, she realized she was addicted to "the idea of love" but knew nothing about loving someone.

"I was addicted to the idea of what I was going to do to change Regis," Hurley said. "As soon as I had my plan, I felt better. I loved my agenda: who he was going to be after I did all those wonderful things."

Over the years, Hurley has treated a lot of people with addictions. She helps them learn how to confront their problems with love. Incorporating Pia Mellody's "survivor" treatment, Hurley conducts intensive four-day sessions with adults who have been abused as children.

Hurley believes there are five types of abuse: physical, emotional, sexual, intellectual and spiritual.

"Any time a child is shamed, it's abuse," she said. "Emotional abuse is the most devastating. It affects the brain. It's unbelievable."

Many successful professionals feel like imposters inside, Hurley added. "They are very effective in their professional life. But usually they can't make it with interpersonal relationships at home."

For example, a person who was battered, or watched battering, as a child, often will repeat that behavior as an adult, Hurley noted. A push becomes a slap, a fisted punch escalates to throwing objects. Eventually someone gets beaten up, she added. "It progresses to guns and knives. It's a progressive behavior, which leads to bigger and bigger weapons."

Key factor

Empowerment is the key to stopping child abuse, Hurley said. "There is a lot of spousal abuse not even tapped into yet. We need to empower people to know that it's detrimental to be physically and emotionally abused — there is help.

"Because of my history of child abuse, I have compassion for others who have been abused. My spiritual path motivates me to serve. And one of my biggest accomplishments has been to love myself."

TAMC advisory committee seeking to fill vacancies

THE TRANSPORTATION Agency for Monterey County (TAMC) is seeking additional members to serve on its Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for transportation issues facing Monterey County.

The purpose of the CAC is to advise the TAMC on community needs, concerns, goals and objectives regarding transportation. The CAC advises TAMC on issues related to traffic congestion, transportation planning and all forms of transportation — including streets and roads, public bus and rail transit, bicycle and pedestrian facilities, and transportation for the elderly and disabled.

Meetings are held four times a year in the evening hours, at various locations in Monterey County. In addition, special workshops and public scoping sessions are held on major plans and special studies.

Persons interested in serving on the CAC should send a letter of interest describing their background and reasons for wanting to serve to: Transportation Agency for Monterey County, ATTN: Citizens Advisory Committee, 312 East Alisal Street, Salinas 93901.

Inquiries must be received by Aug. 1, 1994. Additional information may be obtained by contacting Wendy Murphy, TAMC staff, at 647-7777.

Sunshine Center director knows importance of patience cells during those years, the greater the number of cells they will produce," she noted. "That increases the foundation they have to build upon in the future."

The goal is to make learning fun and never pressure the children, Gentis said. "If they don't want to do it, they don't have to."

In addition to language, math and science, the children's activities include cooking, music and dancing, play acting, field trips, playground time, and free time to choose their own activity.

House rules

The "rules of the house" are limited to safety, respect for another person's property and interacting with each other in a positive way, Gentis noted.

If a child has a problem, the parents are informed on a daily basis, Gentis said. For example, if a child is bitting other children and the problem escalates, a conference is set up with the parents to discuss ways to resolve the situation, she added.

The traditional method is the reward system, Gentis noted. The children get three special stickers each day for not bitting.

Most children behave inappropriately to get more attention, Gentis said. She believes the best way to stop undesirable behavior is to redirect the child's attention to another activity.

"We use positive reinforcement when children are doing something well," Gentis said. "Children would rather do the right thing to get more attention."

Although Gentis views her work at the center as mostly educational, she considers herself, Simon and Narvaez as "extended family" for the children who participate in the school's program.

"You have to have a lot of patience in this field," Gentis said. "I think that's what makes those of us who work in it unique. I hope some of the children remember me for taking good care of them and creating fun through learning."

Laird: Biggest victories come from fighting biggest battles the scene, and Laird acquiesced to dozens of interviews for print, radio and television.

His was the first generation of openly gay politicians, and Laird's own progress matched the overall evolution of the movement.

Laird served on Santa Cruz City Council from 1981 to 1990, twice as mayor (1983-1984, 1987-1988). Many in Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties may remember him as the unsuccessful challenger to Gary Patton in last year's Democratic Primary for State Assembly, where Republican Bruce McPherson was eventually installed.

He has been and is still active with the Democratic Party. At present, he is executive director of the Santa Cruz AIDS Project.

Any conversation with Laird reveals how much the man enjoys politics — both as observer and participant. The Santa Cruz resident has a longstanding interest in politics.

In the 1972 Democratic National Convention, he was a 22-year-old delegate when a non-discrimination clause was drafted for the platform but voted down. At the time, he was aware of only three gay elected officials in the nation. In general, the policy of "don't ask, don't tell" governed the politically ambitious.

"Now there are over 100 openly gay elected officials, and they serve at all levels of government," Laird said.

Laird discussed the significance of the Stonewall rebellion, in which police raided a Greenwich Village, N.Y., bar and gays fought back. That moment in history is considered the inciting incident, the "benchmark," said Laird, in the modern gay rights movement.

The 1970s and early 1980s were the transitional years. Gay politicians became more visible. Numerous anti-discrimination laws were enacted (but not enough, according to Laird). And the Democratic Party fortified its official planks with provisions supporting sexual freedom.

"During the early '70s, I didn't really know what was going on with the gay movement," Laird explained. "I only knew one gay person. There were no role models. You just had to figure everything out for yourself."

It was in this context that Harvey Milk cut his hair, spruced up his wardrobe and was elected to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors in 1977. His assassination the next year by former supervisor Dan White has made Milk a kind of martyr to the movement.

"Most people would think we were totally discouraged, but we weren't," said Laird. "As for me, I decided I wouldn't let other people's hatred rule by life."

Laird shared with the audience his struggles in opening up to his conservative, Midwestern parents, and their eventual acceptance of their son — which became pride in his accomplishments.

To use psychotherapeutic terms, there has been much "personal processing" that has taken place since Stonewall: Children choosing openness, and parents confronting their decisions; gay politicians entering the fray, and the electorate coming to terms with it. Meanwhile, activists grew in number and boldness, with strife and opposition never far away.

"One thing I have observed is that sometimes you have to fight the biggest battles before you get the biggest victories," Laird said.

Of the city council candidates in 1981, Laird was the top vote-getter.

He now enjoys finding the ironies. If the Santa Cruz daily initially ignored his sexual orientation, the newspaper subsequently could not stop referring to him as "the gay mayor," he recalled.

Another publication, a weekly that considered itself progressive, which posed the question, "Can Laird be more than a one-issue candidate?"

A true political animal, Laird is not liable to focus on one issue. "You would think that particularly in a place like Santa Cruz we would get past all of this stuff," Laird said. "It certainly was a challenge for me as mayor, especially in the first few weeks."

Feline fun

THERE'S A new cat product on the market and it looks like a winner! It's called Cat-A-Trail and it's a toy, a bed, a tunnel! Actually, it looks like a giant Slinky toy, 14 inches in diameter and 25 inches long.

Cat-A-Trail is advertised as "connectable cat fun" because you can connect two or more to make a long play tunnel. The pieces are joined by a drawstring closure and it looks like great fun.

Cat-A-Trail is available in red, blue, or teal nylon, and catnip toys are sewn into the plush interior! This product was recently chosen "Best New Cat Product of the Year" at the American Pet Product Manufacturers Association trade show and I understand it's selling like hotcakes. It's available at Petco and other pet supply stores.

Pet TV

Watch for the new Pet Television Network in 1995! This new cable network will initially air 14 hours of live, filmed and taped programs seven days a week. They'll have shows about dogs, cats, horses, reptiles, farm animals, tropical birds and fish and more. Classic animal feature films, series and animated films will all be a part of their entertainment programming.

Q. I know that dogs often "scoot" on the carpet when their anal glands are full, but can cats have the same problem? My tabby, Binky, scoots and seems to pay a lot of attention to his backside.

A. Yes, cats have anal sacs, or scent glands, that can become impacted, infected or abscessed. The sacs usually empty naturally when they become full, but if you notice an odor or signs of discomfort, see your veterinarian.

Q. I've just adopted a cat from the shelter and since I've never owned a cat, I've been asking lots of questions of friends and family who are "experts." However, they seem to disagree about bathing. Do you think it's all right to bathe a cat?

A. As far as I'm concerned, there's no reason not to bathe a healthy cat. It may be easier to have a professional do the job, although some cats seem to love all the attention that's lavished on them while they're being scrubbed, dried and brushed.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE IN HEAT EXHAUSTION & SUN-STROKE ?

JOHN S. MOWRY PHARMACIST

Heat exhaustion and sun-stroke are both caused by the same thing–over-exposure to extreme heat. But, they are very different, and you should know how to tell them apart.

With sun-stroke, the skin is very hot and very dry. It is more serious than heat exhaustion, and a doctor should be called at once. A cold water bath or sponging, ice on the head, moving to a shaded area and undressing can help until the doctor arrives. With heat exhaustion, the skin is cold and clammy. Move the person to a shady place, keep head lower than the body and loosen tight clothing while waiting for the doctor.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service and charge accounts.

Police set rules for Fourth of July

Fireworks ban, restrictions on beach fires, parking, traffic

DUE TO what officials deem a "serious" fire hazard, the City of Carmel is prohibiting the use of all types of fireworks this Fourth of July, including the "safe and sane" variety.

According to officials, the ordinance was adopted in May 1986 to prevent injury and damage to private and public property during the holiday.

"Although safe and sane fireworks are not designed to explode, they certainly can produce intense heat which can easily burn children – and adults, for that matter," said Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras. "The (city) council adopted this measure with the safety of the public and the environment in mind."

'I truly believe that Carmel Beach is now a place for a family to go on the Fourth'

— Pete Poitras

Before the ordinance was adopted, Carmel Beach was a far more dangerous place to be on the Fourth of July, according to Poitras.

"Conditions had deteriorated to the point where it was difficult for a family to enjoy an outing on the beach," he said. "In response to an increasing number of rowdy incidents, certain measures were adopted to preclude this type of activity."

"I truly believe that Carmel Beach is now a place for a family to go on the Fourth," he added, "unmolested by more rowdy, boisterous elements."

Although beach fires will be permitted on Carmel Beach until 10 p.m. on July 4, the following restrictions will be enforced, according to police:

- Fires will be prohibited north of 10th Avenue and above the high tide line.
- Fuel used for the fire "shall not extend more than two feet above the sand, and flames shall not extend more than five feet into the air."
- Fires will not be allowed within 25 feet of any wall, vegetation or combustible material not intended to be used as fuel.

The consumption of alcoholic beverages will be permitted on the beach by persons 21 years of age or older until 10 p.m.

Parking, traffic restrictions

Parking also will be restricted on the Fourth of July, according to police.

On Scenic Drive, Poitras said there will be no parking or vehicle traffic throughout the day. There will be no parking on the east side of San Antonio, from 4th Avenue to Santa Lucia. On 8th and 13th avenues, there will be no parking or vehicle traffic west of San Antonio. On Santa Lucia, there will be no parking on either side of the street, from Camino Real to Scenic Drive.

Additionally, all vehicular traffic on Scenic Drive – starting at its southernmost point and extending to Santa Lucia – will be one-way northbound between 8 a.m. and midnight on July 4, according to Poitras. All vehicle traffic on Santa Lucia – beginning at Scenic Drive and extending east to Carmelo – will be one-way eastbound between 8 a.m. and midnight. Santa Lucia will remain two-way east of its intersection with Carmelo. Westbound traffic on Santa Lucia will be diverted north or southbound on Carmelo.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

Local teens confess to attempted grand theft in La Playa burglary

By SCOTT BREARTON

FIVE JUVENILES from the Carmel area were arrested June 23 after allegedly attempting to steal a $700 Oriental rug from the rear lobby of the La Playa Hotel.

According to Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras, an employee of La Playa observed the youths enter the rear entrance of the hotel – located at Eighth and Camino Real – at about 12:40 a.m. Wednesday, June 22.

"They picked up the couch, rolled up the carpet and were headed out the door when the (employee) spotted them," Poitras said. "They dropped it and took off."

When Carmel police attempted to contact the teenagers, Poitras said they ran to a waiting car, which "sped away with its headlights turned off."

Poitras said an investigation the following morning resulted in the arrests of five juveniles, who were cited and released to the custody of their parents.

All confessed to attempted grand theft, according to Poitras.

"They said they were going to use the rug to carpet the floor of a clubhouse they were about to begin building," said Poitras.

Shoplifter nabbed

In an unrelated matter, Carmel police report that Barry Wingham, 43, of Sausalito, was arrested Wednesday, June 22, for shoplifting and writing bad checks at local businesses.

According to Poitras, Wingham had allegedly stolen merchandise from six Carmel stores and written bad checks at four others before an alert employee at Bruno's Market spotted him attempting to shoplift.

Poitras said Wingham was arraigned last Friday and released after posting $2,000 bail.

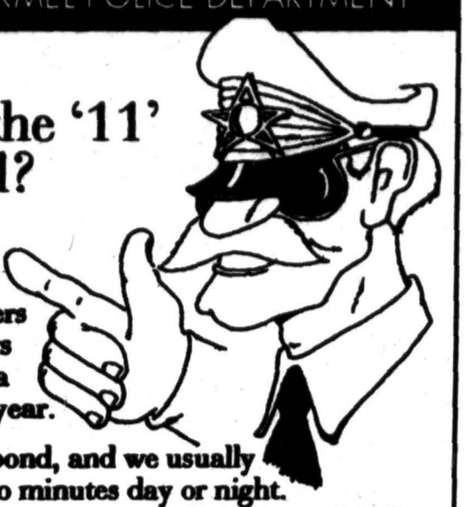
Crime Tip
FROM THE CARMEL POLICE DEPARTMENT

Where's the '11' on the dial?



THE CARMEL-by-the-Sea Police Department answers the phone 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year.

You call — we respond, and we usually get there within two minutes day or night. You knew there was a reason you lived here, right? Most of us don't think about what it takes to make this happen. We just know we can sleep at night because the police are out there and if we call, they respond.

What's the police department's phone number anyway? Easy, you say, "it's 9-1-1." This is true if the situation is an emergency. But what if you need our help, and it's not an emergency? What number do you dial? Although we see it all the time, most of us would have to look it up. Not something we do easily when we're excited. That's the reason the 9-1-1 system was set up. We can all remember the number and dialing it in a crisis is relatively easy.

Because not everything qualifies as an emergency, we have a suggestion. Tape our number to your phone. That way if you need us, you won't have to stop and look it up. The point we're trying to make is this — 9-1-1 is for emergencies. We only have two lines and it's imperative that we reserve them for such calls.

Just as you would want to be able to get us if an intruder were coming through your door, we want to be able to respond to your call. We can't do this if someone's on the line complaining about a car blocking their driveway.

You wouldn't believe the kind of things people call us about using 9-1-1. Every time the power goes out, we get a dozen calls from people asking what happened and when the power's coming back on. Not only are we in the dark about this ourselves, our emergency lines are clogged with non-emergency calls.

Another problem we've been having lately involves people who see our officers responding to something and use 9-1-1 to ask what's going on. If we are going somewhere with lights and sirens, you can bet it's an emergency and our dispatchers are very busy. If you must ask what's going on, please wait until we've dealt with the problem and then call on our regular line. It's in everyone's interest to keep our nine lines clear.

Did you know that if you dial us on 9-1-1, you don't have to say anything to get a response? The system is designed to let us know immediately where the call came from. Once the connection is made, we're on our way. An encouraging feeling if you've had a heart attack and only have the strength to push the buttons.

The 9-1-1 system is an effective tool that allows anyone to call for help anywhere in the city. It even works in pay phones without a quarter. Let's work together and keep the lines clear for true emergencies. After all it just might be your emergency next time.

Perseverance pays off for 17 CVHS graduates

By SCOTT BREARTON

SEVENTEEN SENIORS from Carmel Valley High School received their diplomas during informal commencement exercises held Wednesday, June 22, at the Mid Valley campus.

CVHS Principal Blake Fuessenich spoke of the perseverance and determination shown by his students, many of whom had difficulty learning in a traditional public school setting.

"Some worked right up to the last minute to earn a diploma," said Fuessenich. "It's been difficult for some, easier for others, but, as a group, all have been involved in an ongoing educational experience."

Fuessenich told graduates their success demonstrates that learning has been achieved, and that a key component of that success is their desire to excel.

"No matter how many failures, no matter how long the struggle, there must be a commitment to persevere, with the unyielding belief that attainment of your deepest held desires will be realized," Fuessenich said. "That's the lesson of Carmel Valley High School."

Senior speaker Rachel Kelly told the audience of her difficulties at Carmel High School as a sophomore. In that year, she explained, she was having trouble keeping her grades up.

"I decided to get tested for a learning disability and found out I that I am dyslexic," Kelly said. "I realized that I wasn't dumb, that I just needed more individual attention that I wasn't getting in a regular classroom."

After some convincing from Fuessenich, Kelly said her mother agreed to allow her to attend CVHS.

RACHEL KELLY, the senior class speaker, said the individual attention she received at Carmel Valley High School was just what she needed.

'Learning became important'

"Coming here was the best thing I've ever done," she said. "After that, my life started coming together and everything started to change. Learning became really important and I discovered that I could do very well. The individual help that I receive here was just what I needed."

Kelly said she plans to attend Monterey Peninsula College this fall and hopes to study marine biology or work with animals in some capacity.

Fuessenich then introduced guest speaker Patricia Herro, a former longtime Carmel Unified School District board member whose son, Anthony, graduated from CVHS last year. Fuessenich characterized her as a very special person with boundless and dynamic energy, deep concern for the community, who is "personally and professionally committed to helping others."

Herro said the philosophical goal of education is to turn adolescents into "problem-solving adults." According to Herro, that's what its primary purpose should be.

"You do that here in a way that is not happening in many other settings," Herro said. "You get an opportunity to figure out what the problem is, approach it in your own way and solve it."

"What a gift – to leave here knowing you've had that experience," she added. "You have done something absolutely amazing: you've taken more than an initial step in the direction of becoming the kind of adult that we so desperately need to keep the world together."

Life after graduation: CVHS staff conducts survey of alumni

By SCOTT BREARTON

AN INFORMAL survey recently completed by Carmel Valley High School administrators indicated the majority of graduates polled are gainfully employed in a competitive climate.

"What we've done is just completed a five-year follow-up of our graduates," said CVHS Principal Blake Fuessenich, who addressed the CUSD Board of Education at a public meeting June 23. "Ostensibly, it was to find out what they're doing and to test the efficiency of the program by seeing how many go on to college."

Fuessenich said the results of the survey would be used as the basis for possible program changes in the future.

Of 68 former CVHS students who responded to the questionnaire, he said 37 are working full time, 16 are going to college and 13 are working part time and going to college. Of the two remaining graduates, one is currently traveling and the other is disabled.

While Fuessenich said this is the third time former students have been surveyed, he noted administrators wanted to take it one step further this time – to find out what students thought were the specific strengths and weaknesses of the curriculum.

Fuessenich said administrators originally planned to distribute an informal questionnaire to 50 former students – 40 graduates and 10 non-graduates. He said they had hoped to find 100 former students for the study, but didn't realize how difficult it would be to locate them after five years.

While in the process of locating them, administrators discovered some interesting things about their former students, according to Fuessenich.

"We came up with some real interesting situations," he said. "One is a papaya farmer in Hawaii; another is a bounty hunter in Kentucky; and one is a Christmas tree salesman. But he's doing well, because now he sells legal greens."

Another former CVHS student now attends Harvard Law School in Boston, noted Fuessenich.

Once administrators had a pool of 100 respondents, Fuessenich said, they broke down the responses into specific categories to help them judge the strengths and weaknesses of the program.

Candid responses

"It's hard to get quantifiable data, but I believe the results are pretty honest and candid," Fuessenich said. "In the age of accountability, we have to know if what we're teaching is being learned. That was really the essence of this study."

Fuessenich said 29 former students indicated they liked the special classes offered at CVHS, such as philosophy, psychology, art and computers. Twenty others said the ability to work independently was helpful, enabling them to work at their own pace. Nineteen said the self-paced, individualized program was what made CVHS work for them.

Seventeen said they liked the warm, informal atmosphere at CVHS, while 14 said they enjoyed the close interaction

Ronni Sloan, an aunt of the late CVHS graduate whose life was cut short by an abusive boyfriend in 1980 – nine months after graduating. The $300 award was presented to Shane Morris.

CVHS teacher Bruce Stannard then introduced the winner of the Top Notch Good Citizenship and the two Carmel Realtors Association Scholarship awards. He said the recipients had made a "profound, positive impact" on Carmel Valley High School.

"His mere presence calms the school environment," Stannard said of the citizenship honor. "He is friendly and kind to everyone at school. He listens and cares. When people talk to him, he shares his feelings and thoughts. In our school community, this young man is truly a good citizen and a personification of a gentleman."

Jeremy Cate, who received two of the three awards, was overcome with emotion when he realized Stannard was introducing him.

Cate received a check for $500 from the Carmel Realtors Association, as did Lauren Sherer, who received the second Realtors' award.

Kathleen Kelly Working Studio & Gallery

KATHLEEN KELLY'S whimsical animal sculptures bring out the child in everyone who enters her Mission Patio studio and gallery in Carmel.

From ducks to dinosaurs, Kelly's clay figures are a cross between cute and funny. Her sculpting is especially "feel-good" and fun oriented, which makes for a terrific gift on any occasion.

Kelly is a self-taught artist, who has worked with clay since 1970. Over the years, she has developed a special warmth and humor that is apparent in every creation.

In 1985, Kelly started her own giftware company, The Critter Factory. Her giftware line is sold worldwide, from Wanchai, Hong Kong, to North Pole, Alaska, to the Florida Keys.

"I've literally hand-made thousands of 'critters,'" Kelly said. "And over the years, they have all developed a personality of their own."

Some of the most delightful creations are her clay dolls. Each exquisitely hand-painted doll is outfitted with beautiful clothes and accessories covering a soft body filled with rice.

Kelly's work reflects her deep love of all living things and a sense of whimsy about the lives we all lead.

Prices range from $5 to $500. Kelly also will custom design clothing and accessories for those who want to create their own doll.

There is something special for everyone at Kathleen Kelly's Studio & Gallery on Mission Street between Fifth and Sixth, which is open Wednesday through Monday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Further information is available by calling 625-9763.

between teacher and student.

"I don't know what to make of this data because we just obtained it," Fuessenich said. "It's probably an environment where learning is customized to the individual ability and needs of the student. That seemed to be affirmed in the study. The small group, individualized approach was also validated."

Fuessenich said there were no complaints per se, but there were a few recommendations. He said former students indicated they would have preferred a more challenging curriculum, more direction from staff and more math, history and writing assignments.

"Interestingly, it was the non-graduates who thought we should really tighten up the ship," he noted. "But we probably should push the students a little harder for maximum effort and achievement."

Fuessenich said all 100 respondents said they would recommend Carmel Valley High School to others.

Carmel's Donna McKinley is on a serious roll

■ National competition is next challenge for roller skating champ.

By BRIAN GAYLORD

WHILE THE Nancy Kerrigan-Tonya Harding affair took center stage at the Winter Olympics, and further boosted figure skating's visibility, competitive roller skaters worldwide continued to toil in relative obscurity.

That fact hasn't dampened Carmel roller skater Donna McKinley's enthusiasm for her sport. Like many of her peers, McKinley started roller skating when she was a girl. She took lessons for a few years, then drifted away from the sport.

It wasn't until 1986 that McKinley watched a competition at Del Monte Gardens in Monterey and decided she wanted in on the action. She began taking lessons at Del Monte Gardens in 1987, and soon captured first place in the beginner's level of the NorCal figures competition.

Regional champion

Today, she's the reigning Southwest Pacific regional figure champion, Novice Division. She and dance partner Glenn Sisemore of Salinas made it a clean sweep at the regionals by each placing first in the Novice Division figures competition as representatives of the rink at Scotts Valley.

Beginning July 1 and extending through the week, the two will defend their titles at the 1994 Southwest Pacific Championships in Bakersfield. McKinley doesn't let the competition's toughness affect her focus.

"In the figures, it's just me against the line," says McKinley. "I'm kind of into the mind-body-spirit aspect of sports. I don't skate against other competitors. I don't care what anyone else does; it's what I can do that day, at that particular moment, when I'm out there on the floor. That's how I skate. It's very self-satisfying."

Credits coach

The 38-year-old McKinley credits her coach of two years, Jim Pringle, with helping her advance in the sport. Pringle is a former national champion at figures and single freestyle, and has been the artistic coach for the Olympic Festival and the Pan-American Games.

Pringle and his wife, Bobbi, also a former California state and national champion in figures and dance skating, together run The Rink in Scotts Valley. McKinley left Del Monte Gardens for The Rink two years ago and hasn't looked back.

"Jim and I take the same approach to skating," says McKinley. "We both believe that the mental aspects are very important. He's also an excellent pairs and freestyle coach."

Bobbi Pringle coaches McKinley and Sisemore in roller dance. But it is the figures — the tracing of circles in view of the judges — that McKinley thrives on.

DONNA MCKINLEY has her eyes on placing at the national competition in August.

"I skate dance for fun," McKinley said. "Figures are what I'm in it for. This is kind of an apex year for me. If I make it to the nationals and then place there, I will move up into the Classic ladies figures next year. I've strived for that for so long."

Jim Pringle says that his student has a good chance of reaching the nationals and faring well in competition. "It's all up to Donna. I think she'll do better than last time (McKinley placed 10th out of 27 at last year's nationals). Mental control is the name of the game. Everything must be balanced and controlled, and she's a very good student."

The divisions in roller skating reflect age levels more than skill level, starting from age five and continuing through the Masters Division (ages 45 and older). The Novice Division (McKinley's) is for ages 25 and older. The Esquire Division is for ages 35 and older.

Sought stiffer competition

Although McKinley could skate in the Esquire Division, she has sought the stiffer competition of the Novice Division. After her NorCal win in 1987, McKinley moved up to Bay Area competition, and has been there since. In addition to their regional titles, McKinley and Sisemore are reigning figure and dance champs in Bay Area competition.

Unlike her ice skating counterparts, McKinley has less to shoot for beyond amateur skating. A group called Starlight Express stands as a roller skating version of the Ice Capades, but the only likely opportunities for amateur roller skaters to turn professional are in coaching or possibly judging competitions at the national level.

Artistic roller skating has been a part of the Pan-American Games for 15 years; it has yet to realize the breakthrough that an appearance in the Olympics could mean for the sport. Still, the sport has large numbers of participants nationwide and has received a boost through the popularity of roller blading.

"It's a huge commitment in time that you put into practice and the lessons you have to take, the meets you attend," says McKinley. "I practice, at the minimum, at least four times a week at Scotts Valley. And to keep it up, you've got your club fee every month, which is $40 to $50. You need to take at least one private lesson a week in any aspect that you skate. You've got your skate meet once a month where you pay your entry fee, travel to the meet, and at least one night's lodging. If I ever added up what I spend, I think I would choke."

There also are the costs of skates and their upkeep. McKinley owns several pairs for the various competitions, including a pair of custom-made skates. Roller skates can cost anywhere from $100 to $1,000.

An illustration

But there's no doubt that the time and money spent are worth it to McKinley. An event early this season illustrates her desire to compete.

She had major surgery to remove a fibroid tumor in October. The first Bay Area meet was held one week after her release from the hospital. With points accumulating over the season's course, McKinley didn't want to miss the meet. Struggling simply to walk with the stitches, she took second place in the figures. Without those points she likely would not have finished first in the Bay Area Novice Division this year.

Should McKinley place in the top three in figures at the regional, she'll again advance to the nationals, held in Lincoln, Neb. the first week in August.

She has been given a clean bill of health since the surgery. There's every reason to believe that Donna McKinley will continue to lace 'em up against the nation's best for years to come.

DeKnuffy returns to Stonepine for four-day equestrian series

CHARLES DE KUNFFY, a horse judge, author and clinician, will return for the second year to Stonepine's Equestrian Center in Carmel Valley for a four-day dressage program that will begin on Friday and run through Monday.

This opportunity for instruction will offer participants a condensed sample of an equestrian education similar to that which is conducted at riding schools in Europe. Cost to participate in the clinic will be $440 for all four days or $150 per day. Cost to auditors will be $70 for all four days or $20 per day. The clinic will be limited to 12 riding participants.

"We are thrilled to have Charles de Kunffy back with us at Stonepine, said Daniel Barduzzi, managing director. "The three-day clinic he taught last December at Stonepine was so successful that we have been deluged with inquiries about his return to host another series of instruction."

The dressage program will be taught by de Kunffy and Richard Williams, a pupil of de Kunffy's for the past 16 years. A variety of activities are planned for the four-day dressage clinic including lunging, dressage schooling, dressage test riding, group riding, cavaletti, riding in open country and theory lessons.

"Our clinics are structured to offer a variety of activities which is key to a successful program," said de Kunffy.

The clinic is open to all levels of riders and horses; non-riders are also welcome.

Reservations for the dressage clinic are required and can be made by calling Stonepine's Equestrian office at 659-2245.

The ABCs of How to Make Your Golf Outings More Enjoyable

By Frank Sarubbi, Gen. Mgr., Orlimar • Travaux

I - Ignore advice. Do not give other people advice. They do not want to hear it, and it is not likely going to do them any good anyway.

J - Jive talking. Forget it. It is way out of place on the links. Leave that trash talking for the wanabee basketball players.

K - Kick yourself. Do not kick the club, the bag, the cart, etc. You will find yourself doing much less kicking after a few direct hits.

L - Limit your golf stories. One per round is more than your spouse wants to hear when you get home two hours later than expected, and all golf stories sound the same anyway.

M - Make sure you rake the bunker. It was not the group behind you that was responsible for the footprint you were in.

N - Never say "I knew I was going to do that" after hitting your shot out of bounds. If you really did "know it" you would have not hit it O.B. to begin with.

O - Offer to buy the first round of drinks if you are the big winner in your group. If you lost all that money, you would expect the winner to spring for the first round.

P - Plan on spending a long time on the golf course. Unless you are a member at a small private club, does it not appear that every year more and more hacks decide to take up the game and overcrowd every other golf course on Earth.

Supporting PB development

Dear Editor:

I'd like to respond to Mr. James Craig's letter that appeared in your paper on June 16 regarding Pebble Beach Co.'s development plan.

First, Mr. Craig begins by painting a very environmental picture of Samuel F.B. Morse. Mr. Morse went to great lengths to create much of the atmosphere and world-class reputation that the Pebble Beach Co. and community now enjoy.

But to put development plans into perspective, Mr. Morse's final 1966 land use plans for Del Monte Forest proposed several thousand more homes than Pebble Beach Co., Monterey County and the California Coastal Commission agreed on in the 1984 Land Use Plan.

In the 1984 plan, a total of 3,953 homes were set as the maximum amount to be built in the Forest. The current Pebble Beach Company development proposal would further reduce the number of homes to 3,402.

Secondly, Mr. Craig's reference to certain open space maps being "conveniently lost" by the county is pure nonsense. This comment is a typical example of the way those opposed to this project are using unsubstantiated information to try to detract from the fact that the Pebble Beach Co. has put together an excellent plan.

A point of fact: the company did not, as Mr. Craig states, develop Poppy Hills golf course. This course was built by the Northern California Golf Association and is an excellent example of how a golf course can fit into a forested area and still maintain the atmosphere that makes Del Monte Forest unique.

To recap, Pebble Beach Co. wishes to finish residential development in Del Monte Forest by establishing the maximum amount of homes at 3,402, while leaving over 56 percent of the 5,300-acre Del Monte Forest as forest and recreational open space.

By way of comparison, Pacific Grove has built 4,827 homes on 1,830 acres, and Carmel has placed 3,300 homes on 638 acres.

Mr. Craig and others who oppose this plan should sit back for a minute and honestly consider who has acted responsibly with regard to preservation and development.

Thrilled with university

Dear Editor:

I'd like to respond to recent letters by Mr. Weitzman and Mr. May that decry development of a new California State University at Fort Ord.

As a tax-paying citizen of Monterey County, I'm thrilled that the University system has chosen our area; most communities go to great lengths to attract such a campus. How lucky we'll be to have a portion of Fort Ord property turned into a 21st century institution of higher learning.

The demagoguery exhibited in the aforementioned letters is an embarrassment to the peninsula. Mr. Weitzman's claim that the state will create an "edubusiness" to run a "reform school" or "concentration camp" is outrageous and a gross distortion of what higher education is attempting to do throughout the country — include traditionally underrepresented populations in the mainstream educational environment. I'm confident that CSUMB will neither abandon all admissions requirements nor exclude the traditionally served student.

Such hot-button phrases, coupled with carefully selected statistics, are designed to incite local citizens into opposing the campus by scaring us with threats that CSUMB will dupe us out of Fort Ord property, raise our taxes, and, worst of all, invite "inner city" and "rural" students here — clearly implying that they don't belong here and may threaten our quality of life.

Is Mr. Weitzman ignorant of the fact that the U.S. Army has frequently been a way for those in the inner city and rural areas to make a better life for themselves?

Did he complain about the demographics of Fort Ord residents over the many decades that the army administered the property?

Mr. May's contention that CSUMB is unwelcome because it will target other colleges in the area for closure is hogwash. CSU, San Marcos, another small, start-up campus in San Diego County, has done an excellent job of carving a niche for itself in cooperation with other colleges in its vicinity.

The fate of local higher-learning institutions will be determined by factors that have little to do with the proposed campus.

My message to residents of the peninsula: Support CSU, Monterey Bay; it will benefit our area.

Remembering mom

Dear Editor:

Thank you readers for following the story of my mother's illness. On June 5, my mother passed into the next life. Like a pale yellow swallowtail butterfly, her spirit emerged from its spent cocoon.

It is my prayer that the secrets of cancer will be exposed in my lifetime. Meanwhile, my mother gave me many gifts during the process of her death. Among them are patience, courage and acceptance.

Again, thank you all for your warm and heartfelt support.

An engineer's opinion

Dear Editor:

I have been a resident of the Pebble Beach forest for twenty-five years. During this time I have continuously watched and been concerned with the future and development of our forest.

I have also served on the Pebble Beach Property Owner's Board of Directors for six years as well as serving on the Traffic and Transportation Committee and the Land Use and Zoning Committee.

With over forty years experience as a professional engineer in the practice of civil and environmental engineering and land planning, I can strongly recommend approval of the Pebble Beach Company's Lot Program.

Getting it straight

Dear Editor:

In the Carmel Commentary of June 24, John Brennan revives the idea of a reservoir in Canada de la Segunda, and calls it an "off-stream dam fed by gravity," whereas it is, in fact, a pumped storage facility.

First Person

Mr. Clinton, permit me to vouch for Panetta

JIMMY CARTER is and was a decent man. Not knowing how to play Capitol Hill hardball, he needed someone very much like Leon Panetta in his corner.

Now, President Clinton — facing the perception that he hunkers down at the helm of a rudderless boat — calls on Carmel Valley's most politically powerful resident to head the White House staff.

Excellent choice.

Our former congressman can be tough without turning cruel; he can operate at the highest levels of national government without snubbing the values and friends back home.

I know from personal experience just how smart and wide-ranging Leon Panetta is. To share the example, I have to tell a little story on myself.

For about eight years, I worked on and off Capitol Hill as an advocate. My special area was student financial aid. I lived on the Monterey Peninsula and flew back and forth a lot.

Request made

One afternoon, I went to see Congressman Panetta at his Monterey office. A certain constituent needed a break — would he carry a private bill allocating modest funds for graduate studies?

"That's not the way it works," Leon said.

"I've been assured by my boss," I said, "that private bills can be used in this manner if lawmakers choose to do so.

"The man runs his own student financial aid processing center; I've got to think his advice is accurate."

"The private bill for tuition is a sort of myth," Leon said. "Believe me. That's just not the way it works."

It turned out that Leon knew more about the process than I did. My boss later admitted that he had given me a bum steer — so that I'd spread the word and perhaps cause his opponents on The Hill to make mistakes.

Politics can get pretty weird, and I didn't stay with that firm a whole lot longer, but that's another story.

Leon knew. And he knew something more: how to be right without making the other person feel stupid.

President Clinton today has an extraordinary chief of staff.

'Don't Pave Main Street' crowning achievement for Carmel Heritage

THE SUCCESS of the Carmel Heritage documentary Don't Pave Main Street provides the opportunity to evaluate the mission of the organization — which is to foster the collection, preservation and interpretation of the town's history and culture. This is done through restoration projects, education and exhibits.

The documentary carried the ongoing message "to preserve the unique beauty and spirit of Carmel."

KAY PRINE

The project we ended up with was more than we anticipated. How fortunate we were to have such a sensitive and talented production team in director/producer Julian Ludwig, assistant director and writer Bill Cartwright Jr., cameraman Bruce Nolte and production assistant Ann Talbot! The original music score by David Benoit was superb.

Carmel's past is rich with so many interesting individuals, each a story in himself or herself. We understand why it was not possible to include all.

Finding focus

Directors Ludwig and Cartwright chose subject matter that produced a fascinating look at the bohemians and other Carmelites. Perhaps another film can include those others we remember — writers, poets, musicians, artists and various town characters. Don't Pave Main Street had humor, pathos, tragedy, drama and beauty — not the usual documentary!

The film has been accepted for showing at the American Film Festival in Los Angeles this month and is eligible for an Academy Award.

The reaction at the premiere was extremely gratifying. It reinforced our belief in the film and our mission.

Our members play an important role in making possible all we do, and our board of directors is made up of active community-minded individuals.

Many commitments

During the years, Carmel Heritage has undertaken a number of projects.

It was instrumental in helping to save the Mission Ranch, for which we recently received the Governor's Award; the First Murphy House restoration began as a Carmel Heritage project; by request from the city, Carmel Heritage undertook the Architectural Historic Survey — until it was in the final stages and the city took it over almost three years ago.

In addition, our student awards program for outstanding local history projects was initiated this year; the Marjory Lloyd History Award to individuals for outstanding communication in local history was established at the time we dedicated the Marjory Lloyd Memorial Bench. Carmel Heritage has presented two preservation plaques - one to the Mission Ranch, and the other to the First Murphy House, in appreciation of the First Murphy Committee restoration of this historic building.

Another major Carmel Heritage project has us combining efforts with Friends of Sunset Center on the remodeling project of the Administrative offices. The cost of the project was estimated to be $40,000. Friends of Sunset Center raised $10,000 from donations.

We are preparing Flanders for the Decorator's Showcase, staged by the Alliance on Aging Auxiliary and set for the month of October. Carmel Heritage's obligation is to restore and repair the building before the decorators begin.

Carmel Heritage's desire is to work with the city, Harrison Memorial Library and other non-profit organizations who have the same goals. We are a non-political organization and will continue to strive to fulfill our mission..."to preserve the beauty, the spirit and soul of Carmel."

Kay Prine is the president of Carmel Heritage and has lived in Carmel since 1932.

The plans for that project, which were aired in 1990, called for pumping 100 cfs of water out of the Carmel River through a mean height of 300 feet. If Mr.Brennan is indeed a "practicing civil engineer," he should know that between 3.5 and 4 megawatts of power would be needed to do that.

A positive impression

Dear Editor:

Northern California's young people have certainly made a positive impression on folks here in Washington, D.C.

Over the past several months, I have had the opportunity to work with 1,008 teachers and students from some 84 Northern California high schools who recently participated in the Close Up Foundation government studies program in Washington.

For a full week, the students had the opportunity to develop a better understanding of our democratic process in the nation's capital.

By observing Congressional proceedings, questioning journalists and meeting with government experts, the students transformed the abstract ideas of history and government into concrete experiences.

In addition, students were able to share their views with public officials and with students from other areas of the country.

Participants returned home with a deeper awareness of their responsibilities as citizens and the realization that a single individual can make a difference. Their enthusiasm is to be admired.

The Close Up experience was made possible through the strong support of parents, teachers, and school officials. Also, the David and Lucile Packard Foundation and Viacom International Inc. helped make fellowships available to students in financial need.

On behalf of all of us at Close Up, I would like to thank all who made the experience possible.

Let's recall holiday's true meaning

By BARBARA BOXER

I ENCOURAGE Californians to take a moment today to reflect on the precious gifts of freedom and democracy.

America is a symbol of the promise of freedom. Our constitution and Declaration of Independence are shining examples of the triumph of democracy. These remarkable documents, and the strength and diversity of our people, are an inspiration to countless others struggling for liberty and opportunity. Their struggle is a reminder that we cannot take for granted the freedoms we enjoy in this country. We must be vigilant in the defense of democracy and individual rights, whether at home or abroad.

Democracy is the foundation of the American Dream, and on Independence Day, we celebrate that dream. The Declaration of Independence is a living document that will continue to define us as a nation, and will endure throughout the ages as a symbol to those who cherish the right to be free.

Expectations for Panetta are match for his stature to have to review all the operations at the White House and make recommendations for changes. We are going to look at the lines of authority and see how we can be more effective."

Panetta acknowledged the president had problems in communicating his agenda to the Amercian people. To some degree, he said, blame could be put at the feet of the White House press team, which may be subject to some changes.

"From all sides"

"The president has been hit from all sides on the health care issue, and his popularity is suffering," said David Yamada, political science instructor at Monterey Peninsula College. "Clearly, there has been a lot of bleeding going on at the White House, and, if the metaphor holds up, it is hard to imagine a better surgeon than Leon Panetta to go in and stop that bleeding."

The role of chief of staff is broad and usually redefined with each presidency, Yamada said. Panetta is expected to focus Clinton's priorities, recommend personnel changes (perhaps even at the cabinet level, according to some reports) and exercise damage control.

Most importantly, the Washington veteran may be able to build consensus where the president has peered only at division and fractionalism.

Here in Monterey County, 5th District Supervisor Sam Karas remembered Panetta's ability to find common ground: "We have seen his ability to reach across all boundaries and come up with something everyone can live with."

FIFTH DISTRICT supervisor Sam Karas (left) said Panetta has the ability to 'reach across all boundaries and come up with something everyone can live with.'

The insider

Also appearing on "Nightline" Monday evening was investigative journalist Bob Woodward, who has published a book on the Clinton presidency.

He echoed other observers by describing the outgoing chief of staff as a nice guy "who has no strategic sensibility or focus." Meanwhile, he called Panetta "a politician's politician who knows Washington very well."

As it stands, Clinton is viewed as being in a time crunch. He has major legislative goals, but the November 1994 elections loom heavily, presenting the possibility of Democratic losses in both houses of Congress.

In his interview with The Pine Cone, Farr noted Panetta has been in Washington longer than anyone in the president's previous inner circle. He said Panetta's job will be to keep the president disciplined and focused "in the city that is the world center of egos and power plays."

Great hopes have been invested in Panetta as he faces "the toughest job in Washington," as one commentator put it. In an age of cynicism and broken confidence in public servants, it is remarkable to encounter figures like Panetta, who appears untainted by the nasty business of politics. It is more unusual when they emerge from our midst and secure a place so close to the president's ear.

Water officials seek near-term supplies but coming up dry straight-forward projects.

Last year, voters rejected a desalination plant targeted for a vacant building in Sand City. This year, Paralta has continued to be delayed.

With so little promise on the water-supply horizon, there is already talk about allocating new water from the new Los Padres dam — not upon completion eight years from now, but at the start of construction in 1998.

"We can do that," Hughes said. "That's not a problem. That is what we did with Paralta."

Consequently, cities suffering under the shortage of water may have to get creative, he said. They may have to shift around their own priorities for dividing water — in the categories residential, commercial, vacant lots and additions. To keep everyone happy, Hughes added, they may have to explore possibilities for "water transfers" among users within their own borders.

Ongoing shortage

It is safe to say the slower-growing cities that are closer to build-out, such as Pacific Grove and Carmel, have been unhappy with the way the district has divided the overall water pie.

Most recently, district officials heard from PG about its lack of water for commercial growth. Carmel has expressed a similar lament, although it has not petitioned formally. And Del Rey Oaks has tried to secure water from the Pebble Beach reclamation project to build a long-stalled hotel, on which its very economy reportedly depends.

Celebrations mark festive 4th of July

■ Monterey's annual bash features array of family activities.

AN ARRAY of patriotic family activities are planned in conjunction with the City of Monterey's annual Fourth of July parade and barbecue set for Monday.

Festivities will begin at 10 a.m. Monday, with a flag-raising ceremony and rendition of The Star Spangled Banner kicking off a traditional Fourth of July parade through Old Monterey, according to Alice Gustafson, assistant superintendent for the City of Monterey's recreation department.

Gustafson said the parade route will begin at the intersection of Pearl and Polk streets, where Alvarado Street begins. She said it will continue down Alvarado, proceed left on Del Monte and left again on Calle Principal before concluding on Jefferson Street.

"I think we have a really nice lineup for our parade this year," said Gustafson. "It should be really exciting."

This year's parade entries include clowns (of course) and "Skipper and Sparkle," the Monterey Sports Center's mascots. The Defense Language Institute's human-propelled dragon also

THE FOURTH of July on the Monterey Peninsula will be bursting with parades, barbecues, celebrations and maybe even a few fireworks.

■ Carmel Valley has full day of music, wine, food on tap.

TWO SEPARATE events distinguish Fourth of July festivities at Hidden Valley Music Seminars, 11.2 miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road at Ford Road.

On Monday afternoon, the 15th Annual Salmon Barbecue and Wine Tasting will be sandwiched between two concerts by The Edlos, a world-traveled a capella quartet with a range from madrigals to pops.

Edlos baritone Larry Venza was raised in Carmel Valley and sang in Hidden Valley's summer chorale, the summer seminar orchestra and opera ensemble.

The Edlos will perform at 2:30 p.m. and again at 7:30 p.m. Admission for the concert is $12.

'Music of the Americas'
Symphony sets Sunday concert

THE MONTEREY Bay Symphony will perform at free outdoor pops concert at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

Entitled "Americana: Music of the Americas," the program will begin with the National Anthem sung by soprano Barbara Brooks and will feature "Festival of Freedom," a medley of American music narrated by Gordon Paul Smith.

Mariachi Mixtlan, directed by harpist William Faulkner, will join the orchestra in five pieces arranged by Faulkner and orchestrated by symphony conductor Carl Christensen: El Gusto, La Negra, Cafe Colon, Amor Eterno and Guadalajara.

John Philip Sousa's Stars and Stripes Forever March will also be on the program, led by guest conductor Dick McFarland. Concluding the program will be The Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Concertgoers are invited to bring picnic lunches. Ice cream will be available for sale.

ONE OF the many highlights of last weekend's Monterey Bay Blues Festival was a rousing performance by Gladys Knight. Look for next week's issue of The Carmel Pine Cone — we'll have a look back at the weekend, as captured in words and photos.

Coffee Break

By BEVERLY BORGMAN

She has seen it all

A FEW DAYS ago I drove home from Monterey and noticed the fog creeping over the hills, its gray fingers slipping through the forest, and it took my breath away.

The day before I walked into Carmel from my home on the north side, and stopped dead in my tracks at the view of Point Lobos, one of the most magnificent silhouettes that ever graced an ocean.

And on a morning when I had occasion to drive round the "Presidio curve" near the wharf, it was all I could do to keep my eyes on the road and not on the sight of small boats rocking gently at their moorings, an otter floating on his back intent on cracking open an abalone, and the play of light upon water.

That's why it drives me C-R-A-Z-Y when my sister declines my invitation to come visit because she's "seen it all." That's right. Peg, who lives in Huntington Beach, has said, and I quote verbatim, "I've seen all the tourist things," and she feels no need to see them again.

I know there are readers who will say, "Be thankful. One less guest to deal with," but I love my sister, and I know she loves me. She didn't always, but she does now. In fact, when we talk on the phone or write a letter, we actually say it: I love you. Sometimes it seems very strange, coming from a person who in an earlier time probably considered providing me with an untimely end.

Area's ever-changing face

So why won't she come? Well, she's right. She has seen the touristy things, but it's amazing to me how those "touristy things" keep changing, even the ones the politicians and bureaucrats haven't touched. That fog on the hills doesn't always stay up there looking like a wallflower waiting to be asked to dance. Sometimes it just pours down into Monterey and envelops the town like an overbearing lover.

Point Lobos doesn't always look like a South Seas postcard; occasionally it becomes completely lost in a storm that swirls up from the south. The playful little otters aren't always hanging out at Fisherman's Wharf.

As for changes that man and woman create, I've become reluctant to let 24 hours pass without checking the action in downtown Carmel. I may miss something.

Sometimes they relinquish the territory to those noisy bullies, the sea lions.

As for changes that man and woman create, I've become reluctant to let 24 hours pass without checking the action in downtown Carmel. I may miss something. For example, in the past few weeks, a charming coffee café has opened on Ocean Avenue; Sade's, an old-timers' favorite has quietly moved around the corner to Lincoln Street while the original structure is under siege with a new project.

Return to its roots

The sweater shop on Dolores now sells furniture, and across the street in what was a men's clothing store, aviation memorabilia is featured. The Pine Inn has seen Marriott management depart from its kitchen, and the Golden Bough Theater has gone back to its roots, providing a venue for live performances.

(Incidentally, I'd be willing to bet that there are people living in Carmel who haven't the slightest idea where the Golden Bough is. If they get that right, ask them where the Cherry Foundation is located.)

If my sister wanted a glimpse of John Madden, she might find him ensconced at Em Le's where he's a new part-owner and enthusiastic eater. If she wanted a sample of Thomas Kinkade's sentimental art, she'd find three — count 'em — three outlets.

To my delight, artist-owned galleries are returning to Carmel. You can actually watch a live person paint a picture these days.

Not everything in Carmel is new, of course. The venerable Tuck Box Tea Room marches on. Last week I happened to spot a half-dozen of their freshly-baked scones set out to cool in the back garden. It took great willpower to not run off with one like the Katzenjammer kids used to run off with Mama's pies.

Seventh Street features a Spanish Language Institute and I can even tell you of a bar that welcomes dogs. Yes, indeed, on an exploratory stroll with my daughter and son-in-law, we entered the Cypress Inn from the garden side to find the loveliest little tucked-away bar with only five or six stools.

Among the customers were two dogs of questionable heritage and no, silly, this wasn't a New Yorker cartoon; they weren't sitting on the stools. They were, however, enjoying each other's company while their owners enjoyed some refreshment. Yes, Doris Day, well-known animal lover and fellow correspondent, owns the place.

Renaissance in Old Monterey

So my sister thinks she's seen it all. She hasn't strolled down Alvarado Street in Monterey where a revitalization program seems to be working. Quaint shops and restaurants are popping up like daisies on this street. Behind the Doubletree Hotel, other flowers are popping up in the new fragrance garden, designed especially for the vision impaired.

Well, if this were a letter to my sister, I'd tell her that I know her excuse is lame. I'd also tell her I know the REAL reasons she won't get on a plane and fly up here:

1) There is no restroom on those flying cigars that shuttle between here and Orange County;

2) She'd have to leave her two precious dogs behind, unless she smuggled them aboard and brought them to the Cypress Inn;

3) She thinks there are too many spiders in my house.

She's absolutely right about No. 3 but for Peg I'd round them up and throw them out. After all, a little arachniphobia shouldn't come between sisters.

Jazz Tides

By JOHN DETRO

MacArthur Foundation 'genius grants' make 'strong' comment about Monterey Jazz Festival

WHILE PURSUING its own lights, the MacArthur Foundation — giver of those annual "genius grants" — has managed to comment indirectly on the 1994 Monterey Jazz Festival. And the fest comes out looking strong.

Revolutionary reedman Ornette Coleman won such an award this month. Master drummer Max Roach pocketed MacArthur funds previously. Both men will play the main stage when MJF unrolls in Sept. 16-18.

Anonymous nominators start the process — jazz people for jazz people, painters for painters, so on. The sums range from $235,000 to $375,000 over five years (or $45,000 to $75,000 annually), depending upon the recipient's age. The older the individual, the bigger the fellowship.

Candidates are measured in terms of creativity, skill, dedication. Since 1981, the foundation has given more than $120 million to 414 fellows.

Arena tickets still are available. Call MJF at 373-3366. This year's slate also includes Sonny Rollins, Ray Brown with J.J. Johnson and Milt Jackson, Shirley Horn, Joe Henderson, Bob Mintzer Big Band.

Holiday hoedowns

Jazz and blues came out of individuals who maintained independent spirits under impossible conditions. So it's appropriate that the art forms will help us celebrate Independence Day.

Monterey's Big Little Backyard bash (freebie) will happen from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Monday at the grounds of City Hall. (See separate story, front page of this section, for details.)

Elsewhere, KUSP Public Radio will stage its ninth annual Chomp 'n' Stomp on Saturday and Sunday (7/2-3) at Aptos Village Park across the bay. Free parking and shuttle service will be available from Cabrillo College.

Saturday's bands: Youssou N' Dour, House Jacks, California Cajun Orchestra, Les Tetes Brulees. Sunday: Beausoleil with Michael Doucet, Those Darn Accordions, The Blazers, Conjunto Cespedes.

Ticket prices vary according to age. Advance treatment may be had via 1-800-655-KUSP.

Producer Bruce Labadie made sure that the San Jose America Festival (Saturday through Monday in that city's Guadalupe River Park) would bring forth strong musical sets.

Saturday's blues show will feature Etta James, Sista Monica, Chris Cain. After the July 4 fireworks — African dance tunes from Les Tetes Brulees. Others: Zulu Spear, Rod Piazza and the Mighty Flyers, The Loved Ones, Domestic Science Club, Sol y Luna (California Flamenco). Oriki Theater will put up an African village.

Free. Plenty of children's stuff. Call 1-662-6688.

More festival action

Fujitsu-Concord Jazz Festival announces the lineup for the 26th annual gathering Aug. 12-14 at the familiar pavilion.

Opening night — Guitarist Charlie Byrd with reedman Ken Peplowski, harmonica pro Hendrik Meurkens, Allen Farnham (piano), Bill Douglass (bass), drummer Chuck Redd, Michael Spiro (percussion). Then it'll be Seven Sensational Saxophones with Frank Wess, Gary Foster, Peplowski, Rickey Woodard, Jesse Davis, Chris Potter, Bill Ramsey. (With brilliant pianist Walter Norris in the rhythm section.)

The night's last set will go to the all-star big band fronted by Wess, Gene Harris and Rob McConnell. That monster aggregation includes Sweets Edison, Robert Trowers, Jimmy Cheatham, all seven saxists, Ron Eschete on guitar, guest vocalist Jeannie Cheatham, so many others.

Saturday — Terry Gibbs and Buddy DeFranco saluting Benny Goodman, Cleo Laine with John Dankworth, Joe Williams and the Duke Ellington Orchestra conducted by son Mercer Ellington.

Sunday — Latin sets featuring Eddie Palmieri, Poncho Sanchez with Mongo Santamaria, Ray Barretto, Machete Ensemble. Call (510) 762-BASS about tickets.

September's Russian River Jazz Festival in Guerneville (Sept. 10-11) will have Earl Klugh, Bobby Caldwell, Bela Fleck, Poncho Sanchez, Ylonda Nickell, Grover Washington Jr., Betty Carter, Roy Hargrove, Joe Louis Walker, Emmit Powell and The Gospel Elites.

Call (707) 869-3940 for details and tickets.

Holiday weekend ushers in new peninsula exhibits

Gerald Richman's 'About Pam' set to open at Cherry Center

ABSTRACT PAINTER Gerald Richman's one-man show, "About Pam," opens Saturday with a reception from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The exhibit continues weekdays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. through July 29 at the Carl Cherry Center For The Arts at the corners of Fourth and Guadalupe in Carmel.

Richman's work is abstract and semi-abstract and founded in the figure. He often mixes media, using color and tape. "About Pam" began in 1988 as Richman worked on small sketches for relaxation. He then painted them, and realized that the accumulations of drawings illustrate the history of the paintings and his process.

GERALD RICHMAN

"The drawings are quickly executed with no thought to product," he explains, "I find them very exciting - fresh and revealing."

These drawings become the subjects of additional paintings, and the artist sometimes prefers the intimate sketches to the final paintings themselves.

A native of Chicago, Richman moved to Los Angeles to concentrate on fine art and attended the Otis Parsons School of Design and Otis Art Institute. He studied drawing with Robin Vicarino and then painting with Joe Mugnaini, Donald Mathews, Donald Weygandt and Patrick Ahern, among others. Richman's primary artistic influences were Rembrandt, Soutine,

Zantman to host reception for watercolorist Arne Westerman

AN EXHIBITION of recent watercolor paintings by Arne Westerman will commence with a reception from 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth and Mission in Carmel.

'WINTER SONG'

Westerman is largely self-taught, though he has studied with George Hamilton, Charles Reid and Sergei Bongart. A "people painter," Westerman paints anyone from street people to ballet dancers.

Westerman's work has appeared in the books, Splash 1 and Being An Artist. Among his many affiliations, he is a member of both the American Watercolor Society and the National Watercolor Society.

Zantman can be contacted at 624-8314 for more information on the reception and the Westerman exhibit.

Temple, Murphy, Cirimele are featured at Seaside City Hall

AN EXHIBIT featuring the works of three local talents — Jim Temple, Marla Murphy and Claude Cirimele — will be featured by the Seaside Art Commission at Seaside City Hall, 440 Harcourt.

Temple, who is currently studying primitive art with a focus on indigenous Native American ceremonial masks, has lived on the Monterey Peninsula for 50 years. Temple works with wax-bronze, stone, wood, paper-mache and clay.

Bacchus has arrived

THE GREAT god Bacchus arrived in Carmel Valley with a message: the words wine and people are synonymous.

Bernardus Winery's grand opening of its offices and wine tasting rooms, right smack in the middle of town, had a nice look. Light brown grape arbors adorned the facade of what was once the old Bank of America building, and when the doors opened, imbibers rushed in!

Bacchus was right.

On hand to greet the imbibers was owner Ben Pon, Connie Winners, director of marketing and sales, and General Manager Pat Tracy. Tracy told us they will begin with Monterey Chardonnay – from the white grapes being grown in Carmel Valley – and Sauvignon Blanc. In the future, they will release Cabernet Sauvignon.

The people of this tiny town were delighted with the wines. And the foods were delectable too, coming from such famous kitchens as Carmel Valley's own Baum & Blume – with Chefs Deborah and Deric Wenzler serving – and Bird of Paradise Catering, also of Carmel Valley.

As we left, the magnificent Kris Swanson bronze sculpture at the door depicting a grape harvester winked at us saying, "Remember, even though you live in the everyday, the sublime can and does exist." Ah, me!

CELEBRATING THE grand opening of their Bernardus Carmel Valley offices and wine tasting rooms Monday were owner Ben Pon, Connie Winners, director of marketing and sales, and General Manager Pat Tracy.

Red Sails in the Sunset

When you need a lawyer, where can you find one on a Saturday evening? Well, if you had attended the Legal Services for Seniors, (LSFS) Red Sails in the Sunset benefit, you could have had any number of them.

The men and women of the "bar" were at the spacious Gerald Barton home on Highway 1, with its immense indoor pool overlooking the magnificent Pacific Ocean...and what is more...they were listening to the flamboyant piano music of Elly Fischbach and sampling prepared offerings from such master chefs as: Wendy Brodie of Rancho San Carlos; Mark Berger of the Monterey Plaza Hotel; Terry Teplitzky of Michaels Catering; Jeff Thompson of Jeffries; Cheryl and Don Ferch of Contemporary Catering; and great food from Kate and Steven "Wishbone" Alyea.

You haven't tasted anything until you've tasted Don Ferch's jerkied lamb bits with sliced peaches, dipped in salsa on sweet potato chips!

A silent auction offered lodgings at Ventana Inn, Initiation and three months membership at Chamisol Tennis Club, dinner for two at Spanish Bay, Sunday brunch for two at Corral de Tierra Country Club and many other items which successfully aided LSFS financial goals.

The organization's goal is to raise $10,000 to fund its two offices...one in Pacific Grove and one in Salinas, with a staff of 12. The LSFS expects to hold seven more events in their efforts to raise the money.

Development Director Helen Boody says legal services are offered to seniors at low or no-cost to prepare wills and to help them in other areas.

LSFS Executive Director and Attorney Frank Hespe described their Outreach Program in south Monterey County. Lawyers visit senior centers twice a week to help seniors whom no one else will. Some of the help they furnish includes advice on Social Security, Medicare, and economic and social problems. Hespe added that the LSFS manages to help 3,500 clients a year.

He said many senior citizens are terribly intimidated by issues that are very easily dealt with. This makes LSFS an incredibly vital and needed service in our community.

Remember, the PG office is just a phone call away.

LEGAL SERVICES for Seniors guests and officers gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Barton and enjoyed the cuisine prepared by several well-known area chefs. Among those partaking in tasty hors d'ouvres of lamb with sliced peaches are Roberta Huntington, Chefs Cheryl and Don Ferch and Board President Ralph W. Thompson.

PERUSING AUCTION items adjacent to the immense indoor pool at the Gerald Barton home south of Carmel were LSFS guests and officers. Guests also partook in tasty treats by several area chefs.

AT THE LSFS Red Sails in the Sunset silent auction – held at the Gerald Barton home – were Tina Phillips, chairwoman of the silent auction committee, Grace Feldeisen and Jack Hanks

Soroptomist International of Carmel Bay

"What is a Soroptimist?" is a question frequently asked of members of this women's service organization. Coined from two latin words, "soror" and "optima," meaning the best for women, Soroptimist International is the world's largest service club for women, with clubs chartered in Canada, South America, Europe and Asia.

Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay was established in 1982 with 18 members. Today, it boasts nearly 70 women who are actively engaged in a business or profession and believe that service to their community will make the world a better place. And, indeed, that attitude was in attendance at their lovely "Sailing Home" luncheon installation of officers for 1994-1995, held at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

Acclaiming their honored guests – Kitty Ragsdale, Artie Early and Lee Chamberlain (who are "models" for the club) – mistress of ceremonies Demi Briscoe told us that last year was their most memorable year: they made more money than ever before. Proceeds are disbursed to local and regional organizations serving children, seniors, and last year, they were able to donate quite a bit of money to aid breast cancer.

Past president and honored guest Lee Chamberlain installed the 1994-1995 board of directors, which included president Kathie Ritter, president-elect Judy Lofink, vice-president Margo Nottenkamper, treasurer Pat Sinclair and recording secretary Linda Lamb.

Incoming president Kathie Ritter mentioned that she is "honored" to be president because of a "strong board which always comes up with something wonderful." Current projects are the dinner-dance and auction to be held at Laguna Seca Raceway in October and in November, the second annual Monterey Penin-

The luncheon ended with a gentle spoof about past-president Ericka Engleman, entitled "Ericka's Tears." A "raincoat choir" sang I Cried for You, Teardrops Kept Falling From Her Eyes and other songs which brought laughter to the guests because of faulty phrasing, flatness and sharpness of tone and general hilarity. It's just great to be a woman!

Children's Experimental Theatre

Children's Experimental Theatre (CET) was founded by talented and experienced "bon vivant" Marcia Gambrell Hovick, who, for the last 34 years, has put on hundreds of children's plays, using the youth of the Monterey Peninsula.

Last Sunday, Bravo CET presented a brunch and silent auction at the Carmel Women's Club to raise funds for CET.

Marcia, who also is artistic director, says she took ballet at three, acting at four and piano at five years of age. She didn't take to piano, she admits, but loved to dance and act, which has been her life's ambition since she was a child. She studied theater at Mills College, married, and moved to this area where she started the Children's Experimental Theatre – located at the Indoor Forest Theatre in Carmel – in 1960.

Here, for more than 34 years, CET has provided children in grades one through twelve with the disciplines and techniques of the dramatic arts that has given them confidence, through their training.

Another organizational dream came true in 1971, when Hovick founded The Staff Players. Their first stage production was The American by Philip Lewis. Staff Players has been the adult classical arm of acting for the last 21 years in this area. One of her famous protégés was Stephen Moorer, executive director of the Monterey Bay TheatreFest. Moorer related that his life in theatre wouldn't have been possible without the variety of experiences, lifelong memories, accomplishments and state of mind that CET provided him.

At the Women's Club, some 15 local restaurants combined their forces to provide the brunch...and what a brunch! Toots Lagoon, Scandia, The Village Corner and the Tuck Box – to name a few – provided the most delicious varieties of cooking, including sausage on a stick, quiche, clam chowder, and Bavarian pastries.

CET's benefit-auction is one of the biggest auctions they've had all year. On display were 100 items, including artwork from several peninsula artists, family outings, decorative housewares, ethnic handcrafted novelties and jewelry, clothing and many other fine items too numerous to mention.

Those wishing to donate funds to the Children's Experimental Theatre for the next season may contact Marcia at 624-1531.

MEMBERS OF the Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay gathered at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club (MPCC) at a luncheon to install new officers for 1994-95. Those present included Ericka Engelman, Margo Nottenkamper, Kathie Ritter, Judy Lofink and Pat Sinclair.

HONORED GUESTS at the Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay installation luncheon held at MPCC this week were Kitty Ragsdale, Artie Early and Lee Chamberlain. Chamberlain, a former Soroptimist president, swore in the new officers.

SHANE AND Stewart Fuller, longtime supporters and friends of CET, were on hand to sample all the food during Sunday's benefit.

She didn't ask to be hungry.

War, drought and famine engulfed her country, until the support of Americans like you helped us save her. But there are still many more who desperately need your help. Please care.

PAULA AND Terry Trotter have moved their gallery from Pacific Grove to downtown Carmel.

Trotters settle in new gallery

COMFORTABLY SITUATED in their new downtown gallery, Terry and Paula Trotter say the recent move from Pacific Grove stemmed from a need for additional space.

After 14 years in PG, Trotter Galleries is now located on the northwest side of San Carlos near 6th in Carmel. The gallery exhibits the works of early California artists with selected decorative arts and antique furnishings of the period.

"Many of the artists we feature helped to establish Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula as a significant art center," the Trotters noted. "We've always had a special interest in showing the works of the early artists. These early pioneer artists helped pave the way for future generations of painters."

Artists featured at Trotter Galleries include Armin Hansen, William Ritschel, Percy Gray, S.C. Yuan and Sam Colburn.

The gallery is open daily from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Trotters can be reached at 625-3246.

Carmel artist moves gallery to plaza

Desire to create 'more intimate studio atmosphere' prompted Ann Cunningham's decision

ANN CUNNINGHAM, owner and artist in residence of The Collection of Ann Cunningham, has moved her gallery from Su Vecino Court in Carmel to the middle level of Carmel Plaza at Ocean and Junipero.

"I wanted to create a more intimate studio atmosphere," Cunningham said of her move. "I enjoy the stimulation of working before onlookers and answering their questions about works in progress."

Cunningham paints in an impressionistic style in oil and watercolor at her gallery. She is self-taught, but has worked under the guidance of Harold Holly, Nancy Johnson, Zoltan Szabo, Roberta Clark, Jack Hines and Joyce Pike.

The cosmopolitan flavor of many of Cunnigham's paintings are derived from her extensive travels throughout Europe and a trip to Nepal.

ANN CUNNINGHAM

Cunningham both takes and teaches art workshops, and her gallery also displays the work of others, mostly local artists.

She welcomes commissions in landscape, floral and portaiture.

The gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. She can be reached at 622-9323.

Much-hyped 'Wolf' offers precious little bite

■ Not even Jack Nicholson's prodigious acting talents can save this lackluster film.

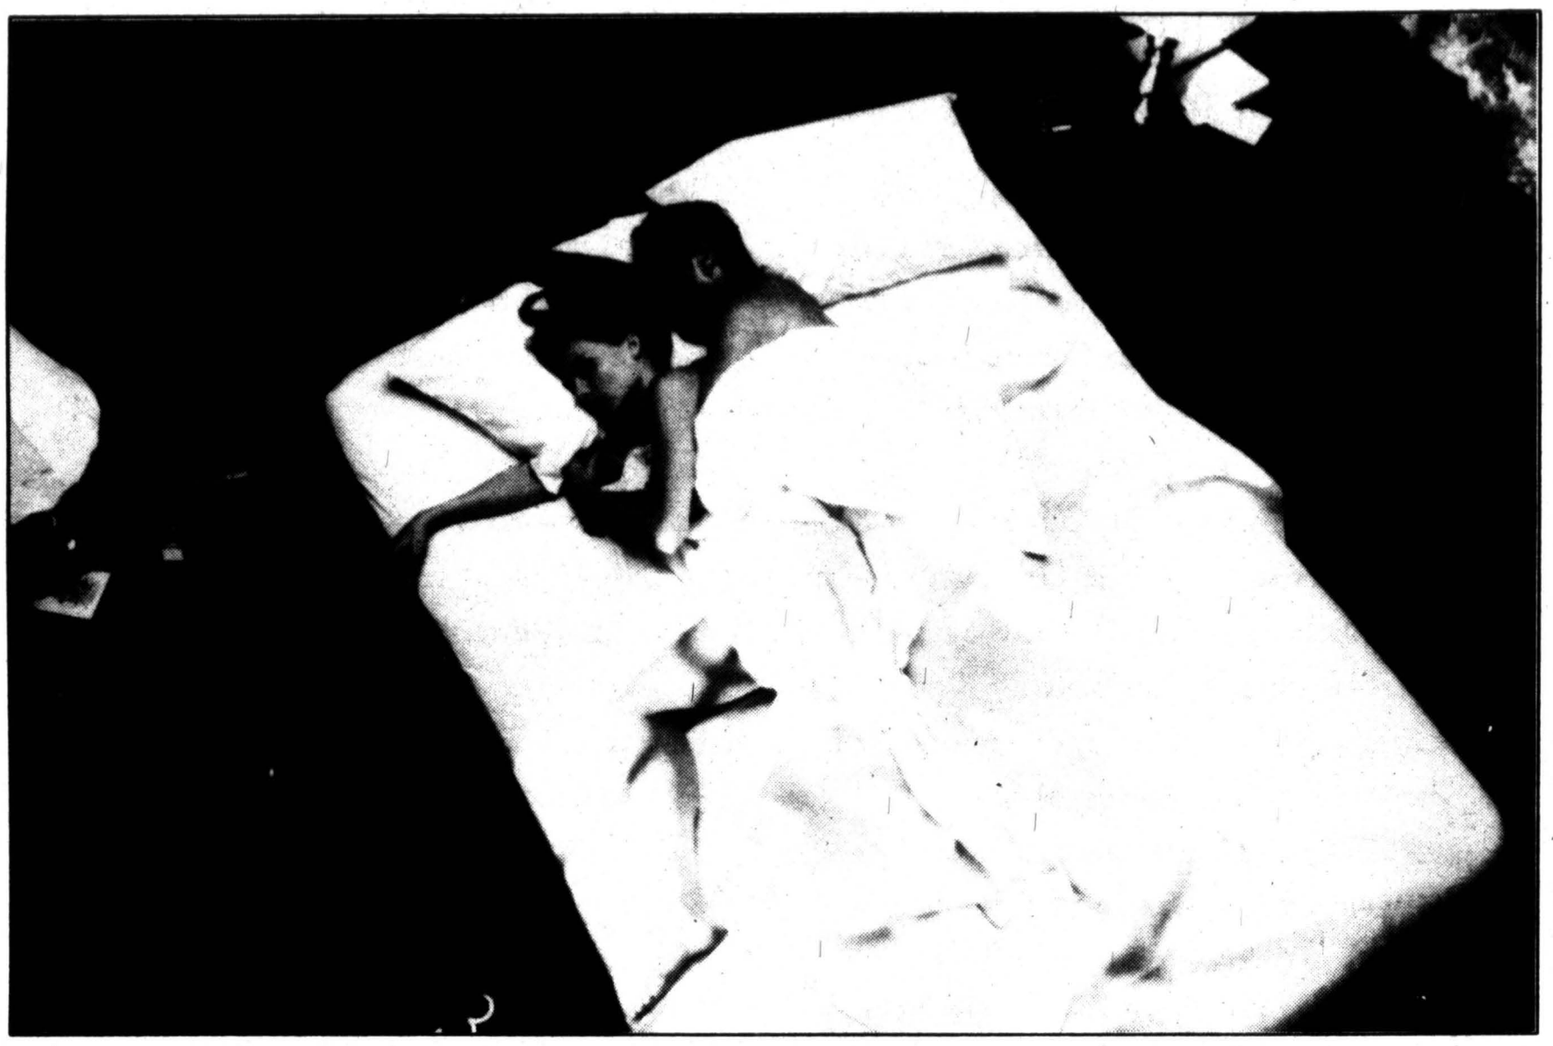
By CRAIG ARNOTT
Pine Cone Movie Critic



THE STAR quality of Jack Nicholson and Michelle Pfeiffer can't save the lackluster action of 'Wolf.'

WOLF IS enough to question what Mike Nichols has been putting in his coffee lately.

The director of The Graduate, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf and Carnal Knowledge has somehow spiraled downward into flat melodrama. His latest effort has all the pizazz of an infomercial.

Perhaps it's because Nichols has never before tackled the horror/romance genre on which he treads so softly here. The action moves with groggy predictability, and the heavy use of slow-motion effects and tacky mood lighting dampen all of the film's intended spark.

The heavy use of slow-motion effects and tacky mood lighting dampen all of the film's intended spark.

Nicholson plays Will Randall, who smacks a wolf while driving home on an empty Vermont road. He gets out to inspect the damage and the injured wolf leaps up and bites him.

Returning to work as an editor at a stuffy publishing firm, Randall undergoes some peculiar changes. His senses of smell and hearing become acute, he grows hair over the bite on his hand, and his mood turns from one of bored resignation to keen vengeance.

WOLF
Crossroads Cinema,
Highway 1 and Rio Road,
Crossroads Shopping Center
Starring: Jack Nicholson, Michelle Pfeiffer, James Spader.
Director: Mike Nichols
Rating: ★

This is by far the most worthwhile part of the film; as handled by a droll Nicholson, the mixture of office affairs and canine instincts is amusing.

JACK NICHOLSON

Randall balks at a demotion instead confronting his smug tycoon boss Raymond Alden (Christopher Plummer) by threatening to jump ship with some of the firm's biggest clients.

Young upstart Stewart Swinton (James Spader), who's gunning for Randall's job and unkindly sleeping with his wife, does not yet grasp the full force of Randall's shaggy renaissance.

Randall is also being hypnotized by Alden's aloof, spoiled daughter Laura (Michelle Pfeiffer), who complains bitterly about Daddy but has no problem spending his money.

By the time Randall and Swinton have their obvious showdown the audience has been assaulted with so many tired stereotypes and devices that it is past the point of caring. Raymond's nightly transformations are framed with enough foreshadowing to kill all elements of surprise and fear.

It also does not help that in werewolf makeup Nicholson looks more like a roadie for the Grateful Dead than a menacing beast.

Nicholson's acting is, fortunately, able to rise above the film's limited powers. He shows cool intelligence and restraint with his characterization of Raymond; portraying him as a principled man who gradually comes to fear himself.

It's the closest the film gets at realizing its potential for tragedy.

Pfeiffer is little more than a sullen feminine presence, and because of this her relationship with Randall seems strained and unconvincing. But Spader is a welcome distraction, again delivering on his suave backstabber image.

Ennio Morricone's score is grand, old-fashioned and entirely forgettable, clogging the film with weepy sentiment. Nichols seems to pour on the music whenever the screenplay lags.

Despite its star quality and hotblooded aspirations, Wolf comes across as nothing more than a neutered, domesticated pup.

Hurdles in homebuying, how to get over them

MOST HOME purchases, after nervous moments and problem solving, are successfully concluded. But home buying requires the coordinated efforts of many people: buyers, sellers, lenders, real estate agents, title officers and inspectors. With this many players involved, a lot of things can go wrong.

You can't always avoid problems during a real estate transaction, but you can prepare yourself in advance for handling problems adeptly when they do arise.

Understand that you're in charge of your real estate transaction. Never delegate your role as decision-maker. But you should delegate as many of the tasks related to the homebuying process as you can. The key is to hire the right people to assist you, and then to stay well-informed throughout the process.

Finding good people to work with is a chore in itself. Don't cut corners. It's one of the more important aspects of your real estate experience. Get recommendations from friends whose opinions you trust. If you are interviewing someone who wasn't recommended to you, be sure to check references.

It helps if you know what to expect during the course of your real estate transaction. Be sure to let the people you've selected to help you know that you want to be kept informed each step of the way. If at any point you feel like you're stumbling around in the dark, speak up. Ask for an update.

Keep a log of all pertinent conversations you have with your crew of professionals. This way if something does go wrong, you have a record of what someone told you was supposed to have happened. You should also receive copies of all documents and correspondence relating to your transaction.

First-time tip: When problems arise, find out who's responsible for the problem and who can remedy the situation. Then work with that person to set things right. If you find that the person who can help you out is not responsive to your plight, go to the next in command.

For instance, if you need to request an extension of your loan contingency and your agent doesn't return your phone calls, talk to your agent's manager/broker. If you have a question about the termite report and the inspector who looked at the property won't return your calls, speak to the owner of the company. If you're having a problem with a new home that's part of a development, go to the project superintendent first, then to the owner of the development company, if necessary. It may help to put your complaint in writing.

If after working up the chain of command, you are still unable to resolve your problem satisfactorily, you have several options. Mediation and arbitration clauses are included in some real estate purchase agreements, providing methods for dispute resolution. In some cases, you may be able to pursue a small claims court remedy if the monetary damages are small. For larger irreconcilable problems, you may need to hire a real estate attorney to investigate other legal remedies.

The closing: In addition, most of the people you'll be working with in your real estate transaction are licensed and work under the jurisdiction of a regulating agency where you can make a formal complaint. In most states, home inspectors aren't required to be licensed, so choose your inspector carefully.
